

May 8th, 2:15 PM - 3:45 PM

Perceptions of Mexican residents in Oregon about Mexican Politics

Anabel López Salinas
Portland State University

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Follow this and additional works at: <http://pdxscholar.library.pdx.edu/studentsymposium>

Part of the American Politics Commons

Anabel López Salinas, "Perceptions of Mexican residents in Oregon about Mexican Politics" (May 8, 2013). Student Research Symposium. Paper 2.

<http://pdxscholar.library.pdx.edu/studentsymposium/2013/Presentation/2>

This Event is brought to you for free and open access. It has been accepted for inclusion in Student Research Symposium by an authorized administrator of PDXScholar. For more information, please contact pdxscholar@pdx.edu.

Perceptions of Mexican residents in Oregon about Mexican Politics

Mexicans living abroad have had the right to vote since 2005

In the 2006 election, 33,000 Mexicans abroad voted by mail

The cost of each vote was of $1,000

There were 61,687 pieces of mail received for the 2012 election

Each vote will cost about $ 600

Pieces of mail from country

In the United States, according to the count, California ranks No. 1 in registrations, followed by Texas, Illinois, Florida and New York.

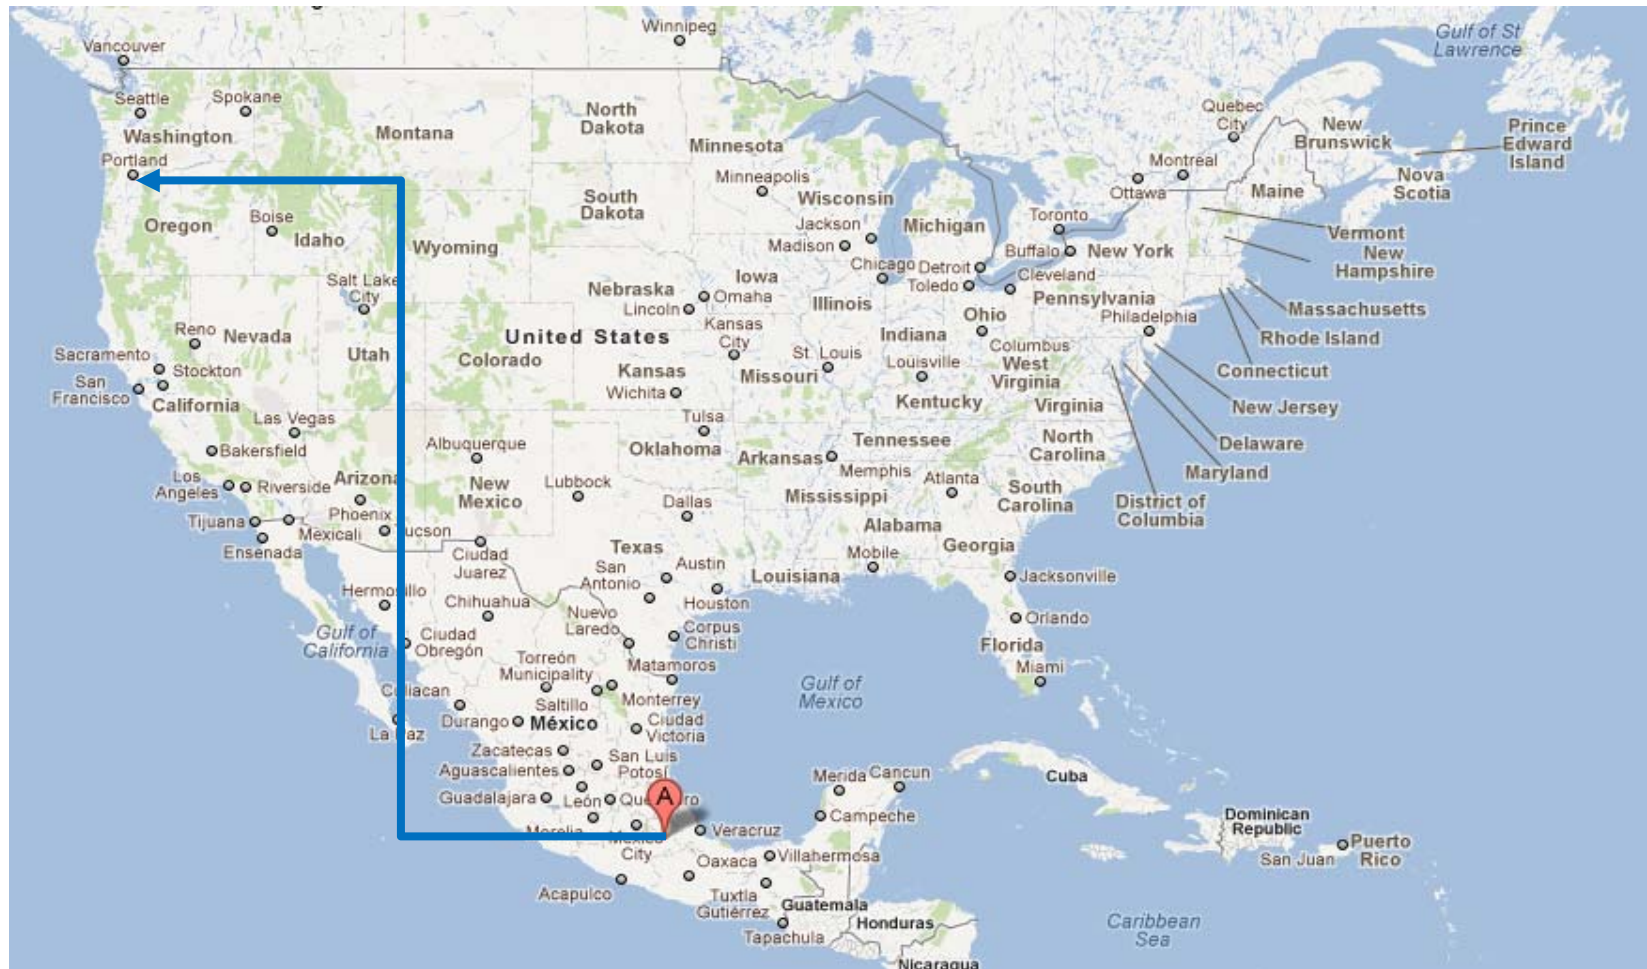

Mexican voters living in the United States

There are 11.7 million foreign-born Mexicans living in the United States

In 2011, Mexicans sent an estimated $21 billion in remittances to families back home, up about 9 percent from a year earlier, but their political influence remains virtually nonexistent

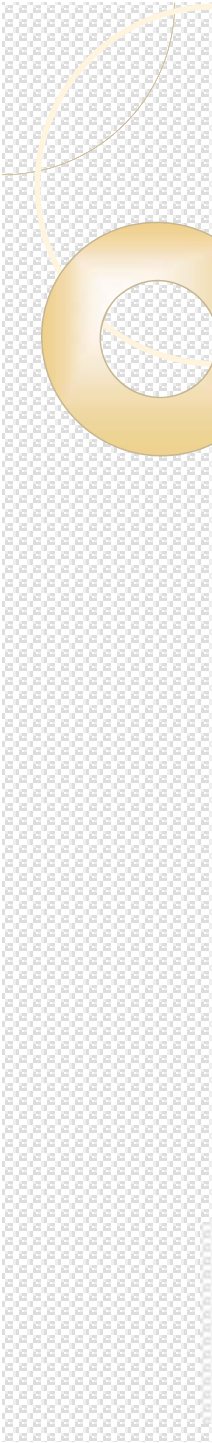

Federal authorities prevent the vast

Molcaxac, Puebla

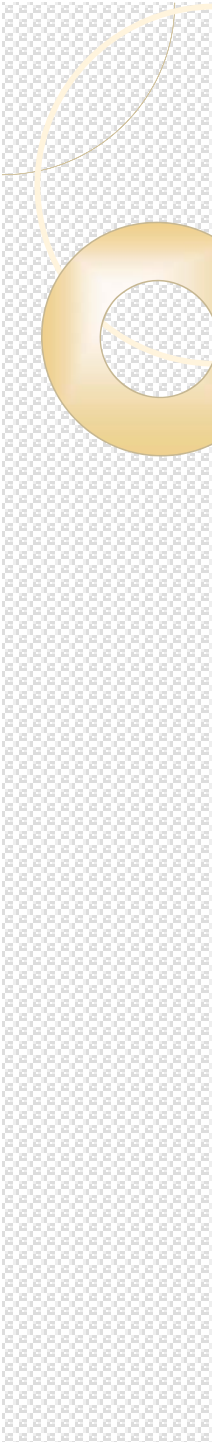

Their interest for the electoral process in Mexico is constrained by the belief that the election results in Mexico do not affect them directly when they live here in the United States

"It is always the same with the Mexican government, lot of talking but little is done"

"It is due to the bad Mexicans politicians that we have abandoned our communities"

“The Mexican government does not want our vote, but our money”

“Going to the Consulate means visiting the bureaucracy and corruption in Mexico”

Most of the people do not know who are the presidential candidates

Mexicans do not have the confidence and think their vote does not matter in Mexico

On the contrary, respondents argue that they tend to more closely follow the news about the U.S. elections

“We know little about U.S. politics, but I want to know more because they affect my life more and my children's future”

Still, most said that if they could, they would vote for the Democratic Party

Thank you