Director's Welcome

It is 6:12am and I have been in bed thinking about writing this for almost an hour. I have something on my mind from the night before. I also have an urge to put everything on the figurative table. This is the tenth time that I have written this opening welcome note for Open Engagement (OE). There is a slight relief that this might be the last. There is also some sadness and a sense of failure.

As we gather to address the theme of sustainability we are faced with our own inability to continue, and a recognition that we want to be doing more, that we do not want to continue a model that is not completely in line with our visions and values. We want to be creating and enacting the futures we want to see.

Open Engagement has in many ways done just that, we have created spaces that are fluid, feminist, queer, accessible, restorative, anti-racist—that are accountable for its aims while also championing radical, visionary, difficult, revolutionary, necessary work.

We have ensured our selection processes are open and democratic. The majority of Open Engagement programming continues to be coordinated through an open call for proposals, and that these committees first and foremost emphasize the local, as well as include national perspectives.

We are proud that the conference continues to be a site committed to diversity and the representation of a wide perspective of the multitude of human experience. We have fostered a space that is majority minority. If the future is brown, femme, and queer, then Open Engagement has been a portal to that future.

In our collective curatorial statement for Open Engagement 2018 we asked “What happens to our labors of love when love is no longer enough?” What do you do when you don’t have the resources to live your values as an organization? When you want a living wage for all people, but you can’t even pay yourself?

Like many of us in this field I was deeply impacted by Ted Purves’ book What We Want Is Free: Generosity and Exchange in Recent Art. Ted Purves was my external graduate advisor in 2006. My graduate thesis was Open Engagement. When I started this endeavor, it felt paramount that attending be free, but ultimately I came to the conclusion that this insistence on generosity devalued our supposedly shared site of exchange. There was no room for collective responsibility, an onus on the public who forms Open Engagement to ensure it continues by investing in it, even if only in a small monetary way. What do we want now when it is not free?

I wish I could talk to Ted about where we are now. He was supportive of the project from its inception. He saw the conference grow from that small convening in Regina, Saskatchewan with 40 presenters and 120 attendees and evolve into the largest artist-led conference dedicated to expanding the dialogue around and creating a site of care for the field of socially engaged art, hosting over 200 presenters and over 1,000 attendees annually. Ted went from being an advisor, to a mentor, to a collaborator and member of the OE national consortium.

We are resourceful and scrappy. We work with the spirit of DIY and DIT. As we move forward I want to retain the punk ethos that Ted saw in us. I also want to be open to whatever the next phase is, even if it means not just radically changing forms, but sunsetting all together.

I hope that as Open Engagement moves into an exploratory year of reflection, that collectively we reach solutions and find forms and ways of working that can support and care for the people engaged in this important work.

In the process of writing this final welcome message, I reread many that came before. A consistent statement I made again and again was that without all of you none of this would be possible. We are OE. It is a testament to the political power of art to affect social change, and in our current moment I find comfort in the energy and support in our coming together. This community is the most valuable outcome of this work.

With hope, love, gratitude, and the pride in knowing that this is without a doubt the most important way I could have spent the last decade.

Land Acknowledgment

We would like to acknowledge that the land on which the Queens Museum stands is the occupied/unceded/seized territory of the Matinecock, Canarsie, Lenape Indian Tribe of Delaware, Nanticoke Lenni-Lenape, and the Ramapough Lenape Peoples.

Acknowledgements

This type of event is not possible without the support of many individuals and institutions. We would like to thank the following for all they have done to make Open Engagement possible over the past 10 years:

Thank you to my graduate thesis advisors Rachelle Viader Knowles and Randal Rodgers who supported this project from its inception.

Ted Purves, who served on my graduate committee, and then continued to work with and support OE over the next 9 years.

Crystal Baxley, who has been part of the conference in indispensable capacities since 2010 and now serves as the Associate Director.

Latham Zearfoss, our Assistant Director.

Nicole Lavalley, Sarah Deann Baugh, and Taryn Cowart, who for many years were the design gurus behind OE.

We would also like to acknowledge Gemma Rose Turnbull and Alexandra Winters, who both took time serving at the helm of the OE Social Media.

The many former students from Portland State University who dedicated energy, time, and most importantly enthusiasm, in particular Ally Drozd, Lexa Walsh, Ariana Jacob, Sean Schumacher, Jason Sturgill, Erica Thomas, Stefan Ransom, Eliza Gregory, Sandy Sampson, Laura Sandow, Will Bryant.

Thank you to Paul Ramirez Jonas for his encouragement, and his belief that Open Engagement is a site that is needed. When the future of OE seemed uncertain, he was an advocate. When it was in search of a new landing point he even generously offered his kitchen table.

We would like to thank all of the members of the Open Engagement National Consortium: Oakland Museum of California, California College of the Arts, School of Art & Art History at University of Illinois at Chicago, the Queens Museum, and A Blade of Grass. Special thanks this year to our hosts the Queens Museum, and in particular Prerana Reddy who has worked with us since 2014.

Thank you to all the selection committee members who have over the years been responsible for shaping our amazing programs.

Our invaluable interns, Sophia Fish, Martina Lentino, Christopher Bednash, Rimona Law, Kyra Gross, Max Gottlieb, Ashley Clodfelter, and Sarah O’Neil.

Our sincere thanks and appreciation goes out to all of the Open Engagement volunteers who have lent their time and energy.

And, the over 2,000 presenters and over 6,000 attendees who have formed the OE community over the past decade.

Anyone who has ever called us out, and especially everyone who has had the generosity to call us in.

With endless gratitude,
Jen Delos Reyes and the Open Engagement Team

2018 Curatorial Statement— SUSTAINABILITY

It is not coincidental that as Open Engagement nears its ten year anniversary we choose to examine the theme of sustainability. While we are thinking broadly about the urgent complexities of sustainability ranging from social, economic, cultural, environmental, educational, and institutional, we are also faced with the issue of our own sustainability as an artist-led project, and in turn, what that means for all of us committed to socially engaged art and social justice practices. What happens to our labors of love when love is no longer enough? As a team of five un/derpaid employees, we have worked to create spaces that are fluid, feminist, queer, accessible, restorative, and anti-racist—spaces that are accountable for their aims while also championing radical, visionary, difficult, revolutionary, necessary work.

How are we as artists, activists, students, educators, administrators, and organizers working towards meaningful and sustainable change? How can we ensure that an ethos of environmental symbiosis and equality amongst all peoples is not only sustained, but updated and informed by future generations? As the world continues to, exhaustingly, (re-)invest in paradigms and institutions that are failing, how are we pushing back against an ethos that prioritizes self-survival over collective nourishment? How do we imbue our actions with foresight, so that we model holistic methodologies of care and restoration on an institutional, perhaps even global, scale? These are questions we are demanding of ourselves, and of you.

Open Engagement 2018 seeks to explore and honor the ways that systems and actions are connected; how they fail and how they thrive. How do artists support themselves and their communities? How do we do so in impactful ways that foster new paradigms of inclusion, nuance, safety, criticality, health, agency, justice, and purpose for all? How are artists and their institutions impacting the environment, culture, economics, technology, politics, social dynamics, and national and international law? How do we match our rage with equally impactful modalities of care and reparation?

Our selection committee prioritized proposals that reflected upon universal sustainability, the sustainability of our field, and the sustainability of Open Engagement as both a site and a form. In the collective review process – made up of volunteer stakeholders – we sought out practical tactics and methodologies for sustainable practices, as well as expansive, theoretical propositions of radical departures from the status quo. In a short string of metaphors, we hoped to form a program that would leave our bellies full and our brains abuzz. As always, what we found was surprising, affirming, challenging and, ultimately, invigorating. We hope you'll agree.

As Open Engagement heads into an exploratory year, let us take this weekend of provocation and dialogue to ready a shared and shifting platform, an open(-ended) engagement that encourages us to think through the sustainability of these practices. And to continue to rethink and rebuild and rethink and rebuild. Over email, over drinks, overseas and over time. Together, we can, and no doubt will, find new ways and re-discover old ways that nurture our field's needs while ensuring that those engaged in this work can continue to mobilize – sustainably – towards a more just and liberated future. Onward, with care.

2018 Open Engagement Team

Jen Delos Reyes
Founder and Director

Jen Delos Reyes is a creative laborer, educator, writer, radical community arts organizer, and author of countless emails. She is the director and founder of Open Engagement. Delos Reyes currently lives and works in Chicago, IL where she is the Associate Director of the School of Art & Art History at the University of Illinois at Chicago.

Crystal Baxley
Associate Director

Crystal Baxley started working on Open Engagement when she was 22 years old; in January she turned 30. In addition to her work with OE, she pays her bills by providing administrative assistance and grant writing for artists and arts non-profits. She is currently seeking opportunities to make a living wage, write for television, spend time in nature, travel, drink natural wine, and collaboratively work to dismantle white-supremacist capitalist patriarchy.

Latham Zearfoss
Assistant Director and Local Support

Latham Zearfoss works in Chicago, where they produce time-based images, objects and experiences about selfhood and otherness. Outside of the studio, they contribute to collective motions toward joy and reflection through social projects such as a queer dance party (Chances Dances), a critical space for white allyship (Make Yourself Useful), and an itinerant conference on socially-engaged art (Open Engagement). Latham graduated from The School of the Art Institute of Chicago with a BFA in 2008 and the University of Illinois at Chicago with an MFA in 2011. They have exhibited their work, screened their videos, and DJed internationally and all over the U.S. www.lathamzearfoss.org

Lauren Meranda
Designer/Creative Director

Lauren Meranda is a Chicago-based designer and educator specializing in projects for cultural institutions, social activism, civic engagement, and public memory. She runs a small design studio (laurenmeranda.com), teaches, and serves on the board of AIGA Chicago.

Andrés Alejandro Chavez
Designer

Andrés is a radical leftist Venezuelan designer residing in Chicago. Creative, curious, and collaborative, he is always looking to learn new things and start new projects. He is a big fan of good typography, Emma Goldman, and minimalist graphic design.

Jade Thacker
Local Liaison and Open House Manager

Jade Thacker is an independent curator and creative producer with a focus on site-specific performances, installations, and events exploring the sensorial, relational aesthetics, and social justice. She currently resides in New York City where she operates an independent creative production house and serves as Artistic Director to art-house perfumery, Folie À Plusieurs. www.jadethacker.org

Danny Orendorff
OEHQ and Volunteer Coordinator

Danny Orendorff is an independent curator, writer, teacher, and activist whose work explores the intersections of DIY and/or craft-oriented cultural production, histories of grassroots social-justice activism, and theories of gender and sexuality. Formerly, Orendorff worked as Curator of Public Programs for the Museum of Arts and Design in New York City and has organized exhibitions, programs, and publications for museums and galleries nationwide. Traveling Between Queens Museum and New York Hall of Science (NYSCI)

Some Open Engagement programming will be held at New York Hall of Science (NYSCI). Please give yourself around 10 minutes of non-motorized travel time through the park to reach NYSCI from the Queens Museum, and vice versa.

Queens Museum Floor Plan

Queens Info

Transit

#7 Train Directions for Queens Museum

Take #7 Train in the direction of Flushing, Queens. Your stop is Mets-Willets Point, the second to last stop on the 7 train. Follow the signs to Flushing Meadows Corona Park (exit left after the turnstiles), walk up the exit ramp of the station, over the boardwalk and into the park. Follow the path past the tennis center to the Unisphere. The Museum will be on your right.

You can also get off at the 111th Street subway stop. Walk south towards 49th avenue and take a left into the park. Follow the path, past the garden roundabout and over the highway. You will see the USTA National Tennis Center on your left. The Museum will be on your right.

#7 Train Accessibility Information For Travel to Queens Museum

The Mets-Willets Point stop is wheelchair accessible “on game days and special events only.” According to the Mets’ site, they only have away games during OE weekend. The closest constantly wheelchair accessible stop is the Flushing-Main Street Stop. If you exit at this stop, head Southwest on Roosevelt for a mile until you reach the entryway for Mets-Willets Point subway stop. Follow the above directions from there.

The #7 Express train stops at the Mets-Willet and Flushing-Main Street / Roosevelt Avenue stop but not the 111 Street / Roosevelt Avenue stop. The #7 Local train makes all listed stops.

Lunch Options

The Queens Museum has invited several food vendors to be present during lunchtime hours on Saturday and Sunday of the conference. Please have cash on hand.

The Queens Museum cafe will also be stocked with box lunches at an affordable rate.

Dinner Options

Queens is home to some of the most diverse cuisine in the country, particularly along the 7 train corridor, which covers parts of Flushing, Jackson Heights, and Long Island City. OE has created a map of eating options within the area, along with several highlights:

Imperial Palace, Cantonese, 136-13 37th Avenue, Flushing, NY 11354

The Lemon Ice King of Corona, Italian Ice, 52-02 108th St, Corona, NY 11368

Nick’s Pizza, Neapolitan, 108-26 Ascan Ave, Forest Hills, NY 11375

Tortillería Nixtamal, Mexican, 104-05 47th Ave, Queens, NY 11368

Spicy and Tasty, Szechuan, 39-07 Prince St, Queens, NY 11354

Spring Shabu Shabu, Japanese Hot Pot, 136-20 38th Ave., 2nd Fl., Flushing, NY 11354

White Bear, Dumplings, 135-02 Roosevelt Ave, Flushing, NY 11354

Café

The cafe will open early to accommodate OE attendees. The cafe features a selections of coffees, teas and pastries and will be open from 9:00 – 5:00pm.

Bathrooms

The Queens Museum strives towards a culturally affirming shared space. As such, their restrooms are gender-affirming to those on a masculine or feminine spectrum. There are no gender neutral bathrooms, but all folks are encouraged to use whichever bathroom is in closest alignment with their chosen gender identity.

Accessibility

Open Engagement is committed to becoming an ADA Welcoming space. We partner with venues who share with our goal, and we work to ensure conference spaces are accessible to all. However, there are challenges with being an itinerant conference and we are sometimes not able to provide access to every venue. We make every effort to note where venues are challenging or inaccessible to persons with limited mobility.

Please email info@openengagement.info or call 503-319-6015 to request accommodations or ask questions about accessibility, or visit us at OEHQ during the conference.

Quiet Rooms and Family Rooms

This year we are unable to offer designated lactation or quiet rooms, but please do contact us to arrange an accommodation if needed.

Welcome Families

Open Engagement and its partners are committed to intergenerational spaces and will support children, parents, and caregivers to the best of our ability. We ask all conference participants to be supportive of kids, parents, and caregivers wherever they are. As prison abolitionist Jason Lydon of the Community Church of Boston said, “kid noises are the sign of a growing movement,” so please join us in the community responsibility needed for a supportive and truly intergenerational environment.

The Queens Museum is stroller-friendly throughout the museum and our bathrooms have baby-changing stations.

Language adapted from the NYC Anarchist Book Fair Collective’s statement on child care.

Youth Activities at Queens Museum

Queens Museum is offering a drop-in Day Camp with activities for youth ages 6 - 11 on Saturday and Sunday in Studio A, located on the second floor. Day Camps are capped at 15 participants at any one time. Families and youth are also invited to take part in QM’s regularly scheduled Sunday Family Workshops on from 1:30pm to 4:30pm, and gallery tours beginning at 1, 2, and 3pm. Tours meet at the Park Side Information Desk.

Featured Presentations

Friday

7:30 - 9:00pm

Open Engagement in Conversation with Laura Raicovich and Paul Ramirez Jonas

Jen Delos Reyes, Crystal Baxley, Latham Zearfoss, Laura Raicovich, and Paul Ramirez Jonas

The core team behind Open Engagement (Jen Delos Reyes, Crystal Baxley, and Latham Zearfoss) will be in conversation with Laura Raicovich and Paul Ramirez Jonas. Together they will reflect on the past 10 years of Open Engagement, and contemplate future possibilities for the OE Team. Expect a candid conversation on SUSTAINABILITY in the context of radical DIY ventures, collective processes, and holistic approaches to institutions.

*The Bronx Museum of the Arts
1040 Grand Concourse, Bronx NY 10454*

Saturday

10:00 - 11:30am

Lucy Lippard Featured Presentation

Lucy Lippard

What do we want to say? How do we want to say it? A polemic about the world we're trying to change, the issues, and a somewhat dyspeptic look at the role of art/social practice/polemics. Is radical optimism possible when embedded in voracious capitalism? Will we downsize or die? Is sustainability a mirage? At my age, nostalgia confuses visions for the future. How much history do you want to know? Is it art? Does it matter? Who's it for? How far out into the world of social energies can artists go and still be satisfied they are making art?

Main Atrium, Queens Museum

Sunday

10:00 - 11:30am

Mel Chin Featured Presentation

Mel Chin

"Is it something I said?"

— Richard Pryor 1975

In the presence of ALL OVER the PLACE, an exhibition featuring over 40 years of Mel Chin's art practice, with themes like Destroying Angels of Our Creation, the Artifice of Facts and Belief, Levity's Wounds and Gravity's Well and the Cruel Light of the Sun, Chin will critically review some of his methods for engaging with society. His talk will explore the conjunction of studio works, like The Funk and Wag from A to Z, with a three-city effort like Flint Fit. He presents an examination of how art can create the questions necessary in the face of environmental ruin and intense societal polarization.

Main Atrium, Queens Museum

Pre-Conference

Date

Thursday, May 10

Locations

The Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York

El Museo de Los Sures

In anticipation of OE 2018, New York based organizations offer Pre-Conference programming to get the conversation started.

The pre-conference is free and open to all kinds of practitioners attending Open Engagement. Please note organizers may require pre-registration.

Thursday, May 10

Pre-Conference

3:00 - 8:00pm

Field Notes: On Justice & Practice

This half-day pre-conference explores the way artists, cultural institutions, and communities forge ethical collaborations that result in lasting and transformative exchanges. The program will begin with a conversation on shifting the practice of philanthropy from charity to justice. We then look at the successes and challenges of collective work, with organizations from the Kenan Project, a three-year initiative to develop a collective impact model with twenty-one cultural institutions through the lens of arts education and community engagement. Conversations that look more specifically at the relationship between artists committed to social change, institutions, and communities will follow.

This event is free for OE attendees, but registration is required.

To register, please visit oe2018precon.eventbrite.com

Open House

Date

Friday, May 11

Various Locations

Inspired by Anthony Fyson and Colin Ward's The Exploding School, OE has adopted an "Exploded Conference" model, where conference-goers experience the sites and context of the city as part of the conference and educational experience. This programming is organized by the presenters and varies in their offerings and approaches. Further information about each Open House, including an interactive map of locations, can be found on OE's website.

Friday, May 11

In Honor of Ted Purves

Advance registration needed
Space is limited

Binoculars recommended but not required
Join an early morning birding walk led by a guide from the NYC Audubon Society in honor of Ted Purves (1964–2017). This intimate gathering will be an opportunity to reflect on Ted's legacy as a teacher, artist, writer, and abiding influence in the field of social practice. Ted was an avid birder as was his mother - a nature center in Urbana, IL was opened in her honor in 1979. Quiet time observing birds in Central Park will provide insight into Ted's keen powers of observation as well as an opportunity to share stories and memories.

Interference Archive Tour

Kevin Caplicki

The mission of Interference Archive is to explore the relationship between cultural production and social movements. This work manifests in an open stacks archival collection, publications, and public programs. This tour will introduce participants to the archive's collections. The archive contains many kinds of objects that are created as part of social movements by the participants themselves: posters, flyers, books, T-shirts and buttons, moving images, audio recordings, and more.

Interference Archive

Parallel Sessions

9:30 – 10:00 am*OE 101Open Engagement

Get an overview of the weekend ahead, ask questions, and get ready to make the most of your experience at OE 2018!

Main Atrium, 1st floor, Queens Museum

12:30 – 2:00 pm*Writing the Social: a participatory workshopGretchen Coombs

How can we write about the individuals and communities we encounter in our practice? How can writing about these social exchanges inform our work and provide documentation and evaluation of the work? Using writing prompts and dialogue with each other we can consider these questions and develop techniques to better express our encounters and to be ethically informed in our approach.

This session can accommodate 20 participants.

*Education Studio B, 2nd floor,
Queens Museum*

After Lucy Lippard's Featured Presentation, OE offers panels, presentations and workshops take place concurrently. Once these programs have ended, we hope that you will participate in a conversational dinner and head to the Knockdown Center to party with us.

RAGE IS SUSTAINABLE ONLY WHEN SHARED: A workshop for the angry and the hopeful!Charles Long & Theodore Kerr

Were you angry way before election day 2017? Are you tired of people telling you to calm down? Save your energy? Pace yourself? Do you feel guided by the sonic chants of those who came before you and charged by the spirits of those who will come after? Join the What Would an HIV Doula Do? (WWHIVDD) collective to learn how to own, share, and SUSTAIN your rage. This workshop is rooted in the understanding that for many of us rage is not a choice — but learning how to live with it can be.

*Lab 1, Lower Level,
New York Hall of Science (NYSCI)*

Carbon SpongeBrooke Singer

Carbon Sponge is a new project by Brooke Singer at the New York Hall of Science exploring an art/citizen science approach to enhancing carbon sequestration in urban soils. Through promoting soil health and pathways for citizens to take charge, can we slow down the release of carbon and turn our soils into better sinks to fight climate change? Brooke and her collaborators will lead a tour of Carbon Sponge, discuss methods for measuring carbon as well future project developments.

*Lab 2, Lower Level,
New York Hall of Science (NYSCI)*

Performing Infrastructure: NYC's Water SupplyLize Mogel

90% of NYC's water comes from rural communities in the Catskills, 150 miles north. This relationship is brokered by land use regulation, public policy, and miles of infrastructure— all of which is practically invisible to city residents. Participants will create a “human diagram” of NYC's water supply system (aqueducts, reservoirs, water tunnels, etc), re-inscribing the physical and social connections between upstate and urban communities. Props will be provided, be prepared to make some noise!

*NYC Watershed Model, 1st floor,
Queens Museum*

Wild Panorama WalkChance Ecologies

Chance Ecologies presents an immersive audio-visual walk around the Panorama, exploring abandoned post-industrial sites across all five boroughs of New York City. Combining narration and digital media, the artists will describe how each site's unique ecologies are responding to specific post-human environmental conditions, weaving together a larger picture of the city's adapting and emerging ecosystems, as they evolve in the face of pollution and climate change, yet beyond human design.

Know Admin, Know Art: Resource Sharing Through Fiscal Sponsorship

Toni Mocerri, Melissa Hamilton, Jamaine Smith, Courtney Harge, Polly Riddims, and Allison Duggan

What if you could grow your artistic practice and create the work you love without also needing to be your own accountant, fundraiser, and back office admin? In this panel, Allied Media Projects, CultureWorks Greater Philadelphia, Fractured Atlas, and Fusion Partnerships will explore how the resource-sharing model of fiscal sponsorship can meet the needs of artists + organizers and ensure a more just and sustainable environment where artists can not only survive but thrive.

Studio Triangle, Artists Studio Wing, 1st floor, Queens Museum

Mirror / Echo / Tilt Curriculum Presentation

Melanie Crean and Shaun Leonardo

Mirror/Echo/Tilt is an art and education project created by artists Melanie Crean, Shaun Leonardo, and Sable Elyse Smith, collaborating with individuals affected by the justice system. They use participatory storytelling methods to create an ongoing archive of video, performance, text and curriculum exploring personal experience with the prison industrial complex. Their presentation includes visual documentation, short reenactments, and discussion of their methods concerning embodied narrative.

Theater, 2nd floor, Queens Museum

Strengthening Communities: Native American Artists, Social Engagement and Museums

Andrea Hanley, Jacob Meders, Allison Rowe

This panel will discuss the Institute of American Indian Art's Museum of Contemporary Native Arts (MoCNA) Social Engagement Art Residency. Previously funded through the Artist Leadership Program for Museums and Cultural Institutions, National Museum of the American Indian (NMAI), Smithsonian Institution and currently funded by the Andy Warhol Foundation, this residency serves as a catalyst for Native artists to generate community dialogue and dynamic creative experiences.

People:Power:Place: a cultural plan for Chinatown North/Callowhill

Asian Arts Initiative

Asian Arts Initiative presents an overview of its People:Power:Place (PPP) cultural plan. PPP is a cultural planning process rooted in community participation to create a shared vision of Chinatown North/Callowhill, Philadelphia, PA, as a holistic people-focused neighborhood and vibrant hub of cultural production. As neighborhood development intensifies, this cultural plan offers recommendations that support and advance the equitable growth and sustainable development of the neighborhood.

Look at Art. Get Paid. — Sustaining Socially Engaged Art under Capitalism

Maia Chao, Josephine Devanbu, Bryn Pernot, and Maria Paula Garcia Mosquera

The US is over 1/3 people of color, yet 90% of core museum goers are white. Even when admission fees are waived, free days at museums serve predominantly affluent, white audiences.

Reframing museum attendance as labor, artist-run program Look at Art. Get Paid. pays people who don't normally go to museums to visit the RISD Museum as guest critics.

The artists reflect on the challenges of sustaining work that uses the language of capitalism—money and labor—to counter-hegemonic ends.

How can we reframe cultural production working one-on-one with different people?

Lanchonete.org

Lanchonete.org is a durational project, that, inspired by a range of ideas and movements, celebrates São Paulo's ubiquitous lunch counters and their role in the life of the Center. It has worked with multiple partners on thematics exploring the right to the city - such as access to food, right to housing, migration, gender - reaching a different range of people/public. It begun as a research process that led to working with a specific community at rua Paim through a community-owned restaurant.

2:00 – 3:00 pm

PulpMobile

Rejin Leys

The Pulp Mobile is a papermaking studio on a cart where participants learn to recycle scrap paper into beautiful decorative paper.

Paper is cheap and ubiquitous. So much of it passes through our hands that we stop seeing it, and rarely wonder where it comes from, how it is made, how much energy and resources each piece represents. The PulpMobile challenges that visible-invisibility by enabling participants to restore value to paper that our society produces in abundance but soon discards.

Queens Museum Front Lawn

3:00 – 4:30 pm

Ways of Being: Support Workshop

Susan Jahoda, Emilio Martinez Poppe, and Caroline Woolard of BFAMFAPhD

How can we support ourselves and each other? This workshop looks at the ways in which we meet our needs for wellbeing in order to dream, practice, and work on any project. Support extends beyond the life of our projects, often shaping the ways in which we navigate the contradictions of living and working on independent projects. Join us for a “brain massage” and mutual connection.

Education Studio B, 2nd floor, Queens Museum

The Value of the Long Haul: Fundred

Dawne Langford, Mary Rubin, Amanda Wiles and Elijah Williamson

As the Fundred Project enters its tenth year, team members discuss learnings, challenges, and the future. Topics include: working with affected communities, themes of value and empathy, deepening partnerships, and sustainability. Initiated by the artist Mel Chin in 2008 as an interdisciplinary, artist-driven project to advance solutions to lead poisoning, Fundred has grown into a national effort, powered by the people. The latest iteration includes Fundred Reserve Open Lab in Washington, DC.

SUSTAINING IMPACT: Considering a project's impact over decades

Tiffany Fairey

This presentation explores how the impacts of socially engaged community arts projects endure and are sustained over time. Drawing on research that examines long-term participatory photography projects and the impact for 10 TAFOS photographers (Peru), 20 years after the project end, it will explore the multi-layered issue of sustainability as it relates to questions of funding, evaluation, ‘value’ and practitioner commitment. How does impact endure? Is sustainability possible? Is it desirable?

Studio Triangle, Artists Studio Wing, 1st floor, Queens Museum

In the Same Room without Screaming: Power, Art, and Learning at the Seward Park Urban Renewal Area

Gabrielle Bendiner-Viani

For 50 years, the Seward Park Urban Renewal Area on the Lower East Side—now “Essex Crossing”—was marked by displacement, discrimination and a lack of affordable housing. Growing from the artist's five-year collaboration, this talk and related book reveal untold stories of community and activism at SPURA and shed light on the possibility for collaborative creative public projects to foster dialogue in a place where neighbors on opposing sides could rarely be in the same room without screaming.

Lakou NOU — OUR Yard: Artist-led Community Sustainability and Social Engagement

Regine Roumain, Veroneque Ignace, Diane Exavier, Erika Pettersen

Haitian culture provides a valuable framework for creating collective responsibility amongst neighbors: the Lakou. Former slaves created this communal living system in resistance to the racial and class divides perpetuated by colonial plantations. Through Lakou NOU — “OUR Yard” in Haitian Creole — Haiti Cultural Exchange adapts this traditional model toward uniting diverse community members in Brooklyn around a shared sense of community and mutual aims through neighborhood artist “residencies.”

Cultivating DC through Permacounterculture

Naoko Wowsugi, Nicole Dowd, Sarah O'Donoghue, and Joseph Shaikewitz (moderator)

Taking its namesake from ‘permaculture’ —an ecological approach characterized by ethical self-sufficiency— “Permacounterculture” synthesized punk music, urban farming, and diverse communities to advocate for food justice in rapidly gentrifying Washington DC. Through an introduction of the project, its collaborative processes, and its community-driven outcomes, the team will discuss how the work catalyzed local subcultures in addition to strategies for supporting sustainable social practices.

YOUTH CURATE WITH OPINIONS! Youth Rapid Response Collecting and Curation

Brooklyn Children's Museum (Shirley Aparicio, Patience Boateng, Kate Calleri, Thomas Conklin, Oasa DuVerney-Gasper, Grey Lambert, Joshua Miller, Sanjida Nisha, Aniyah Celius, Zene Willoughby, and Clara Youens) and Queens Museum (CAH youth are proudly from Queens and all over the world, Claudia Dishon, and Jeannette Rodríguez-Pineda)

The Queens Museum and the Brooklyn Children's Museum will present on youth programs, allowing the youths themselves to generate an open dialogue about how their engagement can keep institutions alive. The Queens Museums COMMUNITY ART HACK program takes a curatorial approach to public and community based arts. The Brooklyn Children's Museum TEEN RAPID RESPONSE COLLECTING TASKFORCE, allows teens to source objects for permanent addition to the collection — showing how they can keep it current.

Conversational Dinners

Date

Saturday, May 12

Various Locations

As a very special part of this year's conference, we have invited artists and activists to host a series of intimate conversations over dinner in a selection of restaurants, mainly around Bushwick and Astoria.

Additional registration is required.

Saturday, May 12, 7:00pm

Conversational Dinners

Relaxing into our Downward Mobility

Ariana Jacob

For this dinner discussion we will set our gaze on a bouquet of topics, including coming to terms with downward mobility, questioning progress and progressiveness as goals, resisting self-improvement schemes, dealing with the shame of never becoming what we thought an adult was supposed to be, and continuing to believe in justice even as we see that the arc of history is not bending in that direction at the moment. We will approach all this in bite size chunks and see what we are able to digest.

Forrest Point

Gender Justice & Abolition

Juana Peralta & Kimberly Mckenzie, Sylvia Rivera Law Project

How do we center TGNCI liberation in the fight for abolition? Staff & collective members of the Sylvia Rivera Law Project facilitate a dialogue about centering TGNCI folks that are incarcerated in the struggle for liberation. Grounding on practices that lift up the art, writing, and movement work of SRLP's members behind the wall. SRLP will share strategies and resources on how to support TGNCI people on the inside and how to movement build through art and writing to support abolition.

Cheryl's Global Soul

The Commons: Environmental Sustainability based on Economic & Social Justice

Jim Costanzo, Aaron Burr Society

This facilitated conversation will focus on the growth of the Commons and it's different manifestations around the world. Social justice movements involving worker coops, community land trusts and other forms of collective ownership are often described as part of the Commons. This is the antithesis of a market economy that is based on constant growth and the maximization of profits. The question is can sustainability be achieved through hyper-local, community production and direct democracy.

Seva Indian Cuisine

Singing to the Choir: Dedications to Ursula K. Le Guin

Sara Knox Hunter, Summer Forum for Inquiry + Exchange

After Ursula K. Le Guin's recent passing, quotes from her texts and speeches proliferated online, spinning into a near-immersive pulsing chorus singing out fragmented dreams for this world. We need nourishment for the dreamwork to be done. Let's gather over a meal and recite (from memory, if possible) our favorite Ursula K. Le Guin quotes to each other. This visionary's words will surely generate a special conversation.

Cape House

Sustaining Our Movements

Decolonize This Place / MTL+

This facilitated conversation will center around the following questions: What can be done in the city to sustain our movements and each other? What are strategic actions beyond our issue silos and practice of protests and rallies? How do we reorient ourselves to see and create decolonial spaces and formations in the city? How do we translate "becoming ungovernable" into concrete action? And what is the role of the artist, the gallery, and the museum today?

Our Time: Sustaining the Movement for Equity in the Arts

Antonio Serna

We are inviting artists, cultural workers, sociologist, city workers, and supporters of the movement to reflect on where we are today. Over the past five years, artists and workers of color have gained prominence in all areas of the cultural landscape. Similarly, in almost every decade since the 60s, there has been an uptick in these cultural opportunities, only to return to business as usual a few years later. We should, however, remain optimistic that real change is here to stay.

Kurry Culture

Thriving Beyond the Metropolis

Emily Ensminger, Elsewhere Museum

Join Directors of Elsewhere, a museum and artist residency situated in a mid-sized southern city, to discuss sustaining experimental organizations outside of major metropolis. How do artist-run spaces, practitioners and projects existing as part of a larger experimental field but positioned outside of major art centers thrive? During this session we will talk through challenges, discuss ideas, share solutions and collaboratively articulate the values of engaging communities in all directions.

Dumpling Galaxy

Black, Queer + Joyful: Funding Black Womyn

Nick Alder & Rae Chardonnay Taylor (Party Noire, SOLAR House Studio)

How do we create affirming spaces for Black joy + Black femmes + queer folk within the confines of capitalism? The co-founders of Party Noire facilitate a conversation exploring tactics, strategies, and tools for building economic sustainability for Black queer womyn. Practicing artists, creative entrepreneurs, space makers, curators + cultural producers, be ready to share resources, and tips for making coin, navigating capitalistic economic systems, and creating community sustainability.

Sol Sips

Shapeshifting Practices in Uncertain NYC

Catherine Feliz & Sonia Louise Davis

What does community look like if the people and places you once called home are disappearing? How do artists reject the Art World's complicity with gentrification? Two lifelong New York City artists + community organizers, Catherine Feliz and Sonia Louise Davis, lead a conversation starting from their respective practices and share tactics for resistance. Come join us for food, laughs, and tears as we exchange 2 cents on how we sustain our connection to home.

Sweet Science

Radio Free Brooklyn: Balancing Sustainability, Responsibility and Freedom

Radio Free Brooklyn

Radio Free Brooklyn is a community organization that produces radio programming ranging from storytelling to local politics and music hosted by local artists, musicians and activists, representing the diversity of Brooklyn communities. Its infrastructure is self-sustaining through dues, partnerships, donations and volunteer efforts. The balance between structure, responsibility and freedom are at the core of Radio Free Brooklyn's philosophy, and will be the topic of this discussion.

Radio Free Brooklyn

Economic Censorship

The People's Cultural Plan

The People's Cultural Plan is a 17-page proposal addressing the short comings of the city's first ever cultural plan. Divided into 3 planks: Housing & Displacement, Labor Equity, and Cultural Funding Equity, the PCP is centered on the idea of black and indigenous reparations. Dinner conversations will focus on economic censorship and radical budgeting.

Bunna Cafe

Invisible Sustenance

Invisibility Lab

In a fast-paced, interconnected world where people rarely have time for nurturing themselves or their relationships, the Invisibility Lab asks: What keeps you going? What sustains you through difficult times? What do you rely on for sustenance? Are these things measurable? Are they visible? And most importantly, are they sustainable? Founder and Chief Researcher, Gabrielle Senza will host a lively dinner conversation and participatory investigation into the phenomenon of invisible things.

A Story of Sustenance - The Ceramic Object as Conduit for Engagement

Anna Metcalfe and Holly Hanessian

Agriculture, food, water and ceramics have had an interconnected history. Today these human productions are revisited through the lens of environmental effects on access to water and food distribution and the rituals involved with domestic sustenance. Two projects will be discussed that overlap with contemporary issues of agriculture, farming, water and how the ceramic medium plays a unique role in an engaged dialogue about sustainability.

From Here to There: Picture Stories of Refugee Women's Lives

Shira Walinsky, Melissa Fogg, Megan Voeller, and Caroline Christianson

Southeast by Southeast, a project of Philadelphia Mural Arts, is a cultural hub programmed with mural workshops, art education, ESL and other social services to benefit South Philadelphia's refugee populations. These populations experience elevated risk to physical and mental health as a result of resettlement. The presentation offers a history of SEExSE and discussion of how photo elicitation has been used at the hub space to understand community needs and develop programs.

Plant Talk Human Talk: An EPA Training for the Beginning of the World

Environmental Performance Agency (andrea haenggi, Christopher Kennedy, Ellie Irons, Catherine Grau)

Plant Talk Human Talk explores the biocultural possibility of spontaneous urban plants (aka weeds) as collaborators and guides in imagining new urban systems/ecologies. The Queens Museum's surrounding landscape serves as a site for applied fieldwork where participants will engage in EPA's embodied scientist training for cultivating plant-human relations and interspecies alliances. Tactics include wild plant unmapping, radical care sitting, and creating embodied scores for a world beyond human.

Artistic Intervention in the Legal Contract

Stephanie Mercedes and John R. Wierzbicki

How can the most basic legal exchange - The Contract - be reinvigorated to create long term rather than short term 'change' models for: activists, artists and social entrepreneurs. The presentation will outline how individuals in the past have used contracts to secure sustainable social change. Alternative contract models used by artists will be presented so that institutions, museums, non-for profits and individual change makers can reconsider the role of the law in sustainable activism.

Parallel Sessions

Exploring, Revealing, and Healing: Art and Watersheds

Sarah Kavage and Vaughn Bell

More than ever before, artists are reconnecting people with their local watersheds and revealing the largely hidden interface between the natural world and our water supply. Examples show artists creating this work in many ways, with a range of funders and collaborators. There is a growing need for current and future practitioners to build and intentionally critique this practice. This workshop will be structured as an open, conversational discussion among participants and as a sharing session for those interested in the practice of working in watersheds.

*NYC Watershed Model, 1st floor,
Queens Museum*

The Attention Economy & Cultural Capitalism of the White Savior Art Market

Artists Without a Cause: Diana Arce and Nine Yamamoto-Masson in absentia

This session is first a presentation, then discussion, about the pervasive, unaddressed privileges that form the very premise of "socially engaged art" in Germany since the "beginning" of the "refugee crisis" in 2015.

As B/PoC immigrant artists/activists in Berlin, we have observed the intensification of the white saviour artist industrial complex and analysed its financial art economy, in which cultural institutions are catalysts&profiteers. "Affective discharge" is thus an art commodity, circulated only among the privileged, with marginalised Others as mere projection screen and art material.

No Way to Do This Right

Roger Peet

Drawing on art & conservation work in DR Congo, this talk will examine how contradictory priorities for the natural world combat each other through crises economic, familial and military, and dig into a dark and personal history of colonialism. It will address the contradictions of working within state structures in a failed state, the possibilities of community theater and comedy in the far forest, and ramifications of crime and treason on the management of foreign ideas in a wild meat economy.

*Studio Triangle, Artists Studio Wing, 1st floor,
Queens Museum*

Walking Tour: Art, Ecology, & Spatial Justice in Flushing Meadows Corona Park

Sam Holleran

This tour will explore the potential for inclusive approaches to community decision-making in parks planning, and the role of creative interventions. Through this signature Queens site—a World's Fairground turned park and testament to Jetsons-era optimism—we will examine the history of civic green spaces with a look at mega events, urban renewal, privatization, and DIY reclamation. Additionally, we will discuss the design process for park improvements and the mechanisms by which they are funded.

*The Panorama of the City of New York,
Queens Museum*

The Power of Time: Social Practice Eco Artists of a Certain Age

Linda Weintraub, Betsy Damon, Lillian Ball, Wendy Brawer, Aviva Rahmani, and Bonnie Ora Sherk

Five pioneers of ecologically and socially engaged art present one social practice/eco art project created before 1990, and one project created since 2010. These presentations will be followed by a discussion among the panelists comparing 'then' and 'now' of social practice art. Topics include shifts in thematic focus, public interface, financial support, professional recognition, and opportunity.

Theater, 2nd floor, Queens Museum

The Power of Three: Timelines for Sustainable Community-Engaged Projects

Ryan Dennis, Isis Ferguson, La Keisha Leek, and Tricia Van Eck

This panel will discuss creating meaningful and lasting community-engaged projects over time. Focusing on the development of four projects of varying scale and form, all have the commonality of a three-year starting timeframe; ranging from research periods to pilot phases. Each panelist will share their individual projects and will collectively discuss the challenges and bright moments through the inception, planning periods, relationship building, activation, and finding a sustainable rhythm.

Viscusi Gallery, Upper Level, New York Hall of Science (NYSCI)m

Through the Stories of five immigrants - New New Yorkers Mentoring Program

New New Yorkers Mentoring Program

During this session, the audience will learn how NNY Mentoring Program helped five artists to create high quality projects by expanding concepts, receiving training on technical skills and/or resources, while encouraged throughout the creative process. The program involved professional advice through one on one mentorship offered by professional artists. Projects explored themes such as Cultural Revolution in China, search for roots, identity, and social justice.

All that you touch you change: creating a community-led AIR program

The Intergenerational Community Arts Council

The Intergenerational Community Arts Council (ICAC) program is a model for community-led decision making in the arts. Hear from: an ICAC member on building community through practice, the lead artist on the selection process and proposed project, and the organizational partners on how this work has challenged their institutions. We'll close with a discussion about how this model might apply to other partnerships between arts organizations and NYCHA-based community centers.

WE ARE FAMILY FC

Jessie McLaughlin

WE ARE FAMILY FC is a participatory workshop aimed at exploring the possible relationships between queerness, sport and arts practice. Over 45mins, participants will be given the opportunity to explore and reflect on queerness using various research materials and tools such as video, music, sports equipment and gentle non-competitive physical exercises. This workshop is open to everyone of any ability, especially those who identify as queer.

Queens Museum Front Lawn

3:00 – 4:30pm*Collective Futures WorkshopSalome Asega and Melanie Crean

Collective Futures is a speculative design workshop, created with the belief that new world views begin with popular imagining. The session involves participants interested in creative activism, education, art, design and resilience, collectively designing a scenario, event or social system which instantiates a future they would like to see. Work involves the group developing scenarios prompted by three different design methodologies and discussing actionable steps to follow.

Transforming Wastescape into Landscape: A Framework for Art
Freshkills Park: Field R/D

Freshkills Park: Field R/D is a project to develop a visionary, community-responsive residency program for the former NYC landfill. Artists work on site in flexible, collaborative, long term engagements with the landscape as it develops from landfill to park over the next 25+ years. Co-organizers and participating artists will illustrate the history and flows of waste and recycling in NYC on the Panorama.

The Panorama of the City of New York, Queens Museum

Part of the SolutionIris Anna Regn and Mayen Alcantara, Los Angeles Country Arts Commission Civic Art Program

In Part of the Solution: YES to ADU, the Civic Art program coalesces the interests of many departments in the County around Affordable Housing Strategy F4 of the Homeless Initiative to design a framework, which invites the creative community to find balanced approaches to building cities and towns. The program promotes the development of Accessory Dwelling Units- ADU's- by gathering ideas that can be referenced as a resource to generate solutions related to new affordable housing typologies.

Symphony for a Broken OrchestraRobert Blackson

There are over 1,000 broken instruments owned by Philadelphia's public schools and no budget to fix them. Symphony for a Broken Orchestra has united hundreds of Philadelphia musicians and audiences in support of music education by playing a composition written specifically for the sounds these broken instruments can make. After the performance instrument repair professionals will repair all of the fixable instruments and return them to the public schools they came from in the fall of 2018.

Plantón Móvil: Moving-With to Practice CommunityLucia Monge

Plantón Móvil is a participatory performance that has happened yearly since 2010. People and plants come together as a "walking forest" to advocate for accessible public green spaces as a basic right, to promote the value of native species without stigmatizing "invasives," and to recognize plants as our living neighbors in the city. To walk-with plants is a way to practice community that includes life-forms beyond human.

Theater, 2nd floor, Queens Museum

Centering Community and Voices: Art Against Erasure and Displacement in ChinatownChinatown Art Brigade, The W.O.W. Project, and Melissa Liu (moderator)

Members and collaborators from Manhattan Chinatown-based groups Chinatown Art Brigade and The W.O.W Project will discuss how they build community and center the voices of local residents using creative practices and publicly accessible participatory art. Both collectives have been addressing the racial, social, and economic inequities their communities continue to face, such as gentrification and cultural erasure, while using art to envision and build toward future solidarity and resilience.

Unisphere Gallery, 2nd floor, Queens Museum

The Development of Creek College; Notes from the FieldCreek College

Creek College is a project bridging art and environmental conservation. We offer a range of art classes and experiences in exchange for aid in the restoration of watersheds. Art participation becomes a catalyst for stewardship. At OE we ask, how can artists make the broadest impact in encouraging personal engagement with sustainable practices? Contemplating the role of art in both concept and practice of sustainability, we will highlight successes and failures that have aided us along the way.

Radicle Engagement: Seeds, Art and StorytellingKaterie Gladdys and Anna Prizzia

Seeds are agents of exchange and expressions of community, culture and place. Art give us metaphors to better understand and connect with societal issues. Katerie Gladdys and Anna Prizzia will discuss their experiences with "Seed Cabinet," an interactive exhibition of images, stories, seeds, and community food systems. We will then facilitate a discussion of how storytelling can inspire the public to cultivate a personal relationship with local agriculture.

Outdoor School: Artist Talk by Diane Borsato

Diane Borsato

Award-winning Toronto-based artist Diane Borsato will show and discuss recent social and ecologically themed projects commissioned by galleries and museums. Projects include: YOUR TEMPER, MY WEATHER, ALL THE NAMES FOR EVERYTHING, and the recent performance for Creative Time : CLOUD PARTY. Each of the socially-engaged and educational works variously involve the collaboration of museum patrons, beekeepers, naturalists, Indigenous scholars, botany experts and many others.

12:50 – 1:05pm

Amazonas Riverine Program

Beatriz Escobar

The Amazonas Riverine Program seeks to foster an ecology of knowledges by collaborating with schools in the remote Brazilian Amazon, where communities are looking for alternative alliances as they resist mechanisms of control imposed on them in the name of development. The project initiators will discuss their collaboration with the Boas Novas School, where a communal kitchen was built with students and parents. The presentation will include a critical discussion of the chosen approach.

Open Platform has been designed as a space in the conference to facilitate the sharing of many ideas, strategies, projects, actions, and efforts within the field. Conference goers are encouraged to drop in and out at their leisure throughout the weekend. Open Platform presentations are ten minutes long with five minutes for Q&A with the audience. Open Platform presentations are free and open to the public.

1:10 – 1:25pm

Sculptures That Talk

Erin Turner and Vansler Nosie

‘Sculptures that Talk’ is a collaborative artwork and public sculpture that promotes engagement and direct action. Imagery as a material becomes a site in itself to promote a conversation about the relationship to the land of Oak Flat, Arizona, sacred to the San Carlos Apache in a past, present, and future oriented manner, as well as a broader conversation about why it is important to protect our public lands as a whole. The Apache Stronghold and Social Practice Queens will present on Oak Flat.

1:30 – 1:45pm

How Far: Prison & Land Use Workshop

Sheena Hoszko

How Far: Prison & Land Use Workshop examines how prisons sites are intrinsically linked with resource extraction. Through DIY mapping practices, workshop participants will link water supply maps with prisons close and far.

1:50 – 2:05pm

Project HEARD: Research, Tech, & Art for Endangered Environmental Activists

Adrien Tofighi

The Harbor for Environmental Activists and Rights Defenders (Project HEARD) is a platform created to improve the understanding and security of rural and environmental rights defenders. The purpose of this session is to explore potential actions that can help push the project from a strictly resource-rich database to a pro-active space for innovative artists, activists, technologists, and researchers to work with organizations and companies in less traditional and more transformative manners.

2:10 – 2:25pm

The Power Move

The Jumping Janes

Inspired by Jane Fonda, The Jumping Janes want to get people up and moving and stimulate their creative problem solving. To encourage both activist and active audience participation, The Jumping Janes offer a 7-minute choreographed sequence of power moves. The sequence practices both utilitarian movement skills and strength training to prepare participants for real-life situations.

2:30 – 2:45pm*El Recreo: A Place to Treat Restaurant WorkersManuel Molina Martagon

El Recreo, hosted during May 2018 at Recess in Brooklyn, is a project that provides a physical space for restaurant workers to hang out and relax, eat and unwind. With good food, purposely designed programs and activities, El Recreo wants to be a place for connection of different views and experiences that come from working in the food industry. Lunch is free for restaurant workers that visit the project.

The Remediation Arboretum reboots urban soils; The Climate Corridor, transforms the streetscape into a climate visualization; and The Community Lab Orchard hosts citizen scientists who explore the culture of favorite and forgotten small fruits for a resilient future.

3:50 – 4:05pm*Social Impact Art & DesignGrace Lynne Haynes

Grace Lynne Haynes is a LA based social impact artist who will be discussing how we can utilize art and design as a way to create equity and raise awareness. She will discuss the intersection between social impact and design, and how the two can be formed to create maximum impact in underrepresented communities. Grace will also be showcasing the process behind her social impact art practice and how she develops her designs and illustrations.

4:10 – 4:25pm*Where You At? Art, Ecology and Restoring Connection to PlaceBrad Kik

The industrial economy is both a displacer and an eraser, intent on creating a single overarching narrative to replace the rich mosaic of stories binding people in membership with each other and the land. Artists have the power to resist, by engaging with these mosaic stories. Art institutions are uniquely positioned to become thoughtful "centers" that foster the relationship between artists, community and these tens of thousands of stories.

3:10 – 3:25pm*Bearded Flamingos: on 'Passing', 'Migration' and 'Camouflage'Falak Vasa

'Bearded Flamingos' is a visual art and writing project, an exploration of strategies of survival (passing, migration and camouflage) through embodiment and recitation. How can the hegemonic conditions that center cisgendered heterosexual white men be reinvented (rather than reversed) to offer space to the augmented self, the bearded flamingo? How can such a reinvention, such an augmentation be sustained?

~bearded flamingos exist~bearded flamingos think they're the shit~bearded flamingos are~

3:30 – 3:45pm*SOIL SERIES: A Social Drawing – A Year in AppalachiaFrancesca Fiore and Hillary Wagner

SOIL SERIES: A Social Drawing is an ongoing collaboration between artists Francesca Fiore and Hillary Wagner and the rural Appalachian community of Bethel, Ohio. Since the 2016 presidential election, Appalachia has come to the fore in American political discourse. Currently one year into their project, the artists will reflect on the new forms socially engaged praxis can and must take when carried out in the context of rural America.

3:50 – 4:05pm*Failure? Art Schools Working in Creative CommunitiesJaclyn Jacunski

Can art schools working in communities commit to long-term projects creating sustainable programming with community needs and timelines? What ways can art schools address civic goals with long-term, successful, sited cultural outcomes in which village value overrides art school value. How do teaching artists creatively and ethically work within spring and fall semester calendars while also acknowledging complex lives, structures and authentic relationships- because trust takes time.

4:10 – 4:25pm*How Can Artists Be Friends of Recovery?Daniel Totten

Since his brother's heroin overdose in July 2016, Daniel Totten has been trying to understand his role as an artist and community member within his hometown of Red Hook, NY (Dutchess County). In this presentation he'll share his recent efforts of creating a support network and arts mentoring program for young adults and his newly informed life practices.

4:30 – 4:45pm*Toast Ale: Fighting food waste one beer at a timeKaren Kuhn

Karen Kuhn, head of Business Development, will discuss how Toast Ale is fighting food waste through their delicious craft beer, which is brewed in New York using surplus loaves of bread from local bakeries that would have gone to waste. ## Date

Saturday, May 12

Sunday, May 13

Location

New York Hall of Science (NYSCI)

These trainings are offered to provide attendees with skills and tools to help better address creative work at the complex intersection of art and social justice, with skill-sharing opportunities from professional facilitators for practicing artists, administrators and activists to use in the field. Trainings have limited capacity; pre-registration online is highly recommended.

Saturday, May 12 & Sunday, May 13

Trainings

Saturday

2:00 – 4:00pm

Collaborating Across Age Groups - Duke SPL & Usdan

Pedro Lasch, Lauren Brandt Schloss, Jillian Greenberg, Lindsay Smilow, and Nate Koch

Many socially engaged artists care for bridging age groups through collaborations, but institutions that work with broad age ranges are rarely open to such work. 'Dreaming in the Woods' is a three-year collaboration by artist Pedro Lasch and Usdan Summer Camp for the Arts, including over 1,500 participants ages 4-18 each year. Join Lasch, Usdan staff, and producer Nate Koch, to learn what is at stake, share (y)our experiences, and develop models for such large or small scale collaborations.

*Lab 1, Lower Level,
New York Hall of Science (NYSCI)*

2:00 – 4:00pm

Becoming an Access Ambassador: Fostering Anti-Oppressive Communities

Rebirth Garments - Sky Cubacub and Alison Kopit

Rebirth Garments facilitates an Access Ambassador workshop where participants develop tools to foster anti-oppressive and accessible spaces. The interactive curriculum includes terminology and basic information about access and disability, creative problem-solving, coalition-building opportunities, and action planning. This workshop is suitable for community organizers, museum workers, performance venues, and others who are interested in learning how to infuse cultural spaces with accessibility.

*Viscusi Gallery, Upper Level,
New York Hall of Science (NYSCI)*

Sunday

2:00 – 4:00pm

Decolonization and Cultural Institutions

Amin Husain and Nitasha Dhillon

The moment is overdue for museums to acknowledge how and why they have been built on occupied land and filled with plundered objects. Contemporary art institutions can no longer disregard well-documented evidence about the role they play in helping to elevate local rents and displace residential populations. Details surrounding the recent Brooklyn Museum curatorial hires are only a gateway to broader structural changes desired today. What are necessary steps to decolonize our institutions?

2018 Featured Presenters

Mel Chin

Mel Chin, from Houston, Texas, is known for the broad range of approaches in his art, including works that require multi-disciplinary, collaborative teamwork and works that conjoin cross-cultural aesthetics with complex ideas. He developed Revival Field (1989-ongoing), a project that pioneered the field of "green remediation," the use of plants to remove toxic, heavy metals from the soil. A current project, Fundred Dollar Bill/Operation Paydirt, focuses on national awareness and prevention of childhood lead-poisoning through art-making. Mel is also well known for his iconic sculptures and installations, works that often address the importance of memory and collective identity, and for inserting art into unlikely places, including destroyed homes, toxic landfills, and even popular television, investigating how art can provoke greater social awareness and responsibility.

Lucy Lippard

Lucy R. Lippard is a writer/activist/sometime curator, author of 24 books on contemporary art activism, feminism, place, photography, archaeology, and land use. Most recently: Undermining: A Wild Ride through Land Use, Politics and Art in the Changing West (2014), Time and Time Again (on Chaco and Mesa Verde, with photographer Peter Goin) and Down Country: The Tano of the Galisteo Basin, 1250-1782, (2010) as well as Mixed Blessings: New Art in a Multicultural America (1990) and The Lure of the Local: Senses of Place in a Multicentered Society (1997). Recipient of nine honorary degrees, a Guggenheim Fellowship, and a Lannan Grant, among other awards, she lives off the grid in rural New Mexico, where for 20 years she has edited the monthly community newsletter, El Puente de Galisteo.

Call for Collaborators!

We now turn to our community to ask how should we move forward? We want to continue to serve as a site of care for our field, and we can't do so without direct input from its practitioners.

You all are our collaborators, our co-conspirators. We exist because of you. What do we need to do next? What work is not being done that we can manifest and conjure for the field? We welcome and value your thoughts on how you would like to see OE evolve.

We've been ruminating on the words there is always a better idea. We are hoping to fortify that which has made Open Engagement most powerful — our radical attempts at inclusion and our steadfast insistence on the importance of care and reflection within this ever-expanding and complex field.

Open Engagement believes in the power of art and artists to enact creative change in the world. It is this political potential of art and dialogue that guided OE from its earliest days as a student project. Year after year it has been made possible because of a DIY spirit, a punk ethos, and an incredible group of community members who rally around the idea and work hard to make the conference happen with wildly limited resources.

OE first took shape in 2007 because Jen recognized an urgent need for community and support in this field. Since then, gatherings such as the Creative Time Summit and Common Field have emerged, who also take on the work of creating sites to address the critical issues of artists and organizations at the intersection of art & social justice.

Open Engagement is not a non-profit organization — it is an artist-run project that has always operated primarily with volunteer labor. OE has never had a full-time staff member, our founder/director is not paid for her contributions, and our operating budget doesn't reach even half of the average funding for convenings a fraction of our size. We have never been in a financial position to compensate presenters, subsidy the cost of their travel, or pay staff a fair wage. As we imagine the future, we are searching for ways to value and sustain everyone involved. At present, we do not have any funding secured beyond 2018.

What could OE be in the future? What's there, what's missing? How can we generate resources that ensure everyone involved is valued? What do you want, what do you need? What do you want to give? How can we be a safe space for radical thought? How can we be and support the artists, activists, writers, organizers, witches, and punks that we want to be and want to see in the world? How can we work to dismantle the white-supremacist capitalist patriarchy? How can we support alternative economies, and what structures are there to be imagined and enacted?

These are just some of the questions that we've come up with — surely there are a million more. Anything that you'd like to share with us — your thoughts, your time, your resources to move OE forward — we would be so grateful to receive.

You can reach us through info@openengagement.info, or various other social platforms. We've also set up an anonymous Google Form on our website, if that better suits your needs.

Can you or your institution host us for an artist talk, workshop, residency? We are looking for sites to hold intimate and broad conversations with local artists, organizers, students, educators, activists, and communities invested in arts and social change. We are also looking for opportunities for pure rest and relaxation, to reconnect with each other and our individual and shared dreams for the future.

We are here with you. We are here to work hard, fight for change, and show up for one another in the continued struggles of our time.
