Lesson 2 – Meeting People

Author: Emiko Konomi, Portland State University
Lesson 2 - Meeting People

Dialogue 1

Emily, an exchange student, is staying with the Yamamoto family and is heading out in the morning.

Emily: Anou, ima nan-ji desu ka.      Um, what time is it (now)?

Yamamoto: Etto…hachi-ji desu yo.    Let’s see…it’s eight o’clock.

Emily: Ja, itte kimasu.                Well, see you later.

Outside, Emily sees Mr. Tanaka, a neighbor.

Emily: Ii otenki desu nee.            It’s a beautiful day, isn’t it?

Tanaka: A, Emily-san, gakkou desu ka. Oh, Michael. Are you going to school?

Emily: Ie, kyou wa gakkou ja nai desu. No, not school, today.

Arubaito desu.                        I’m working.

2-1-1  /Noun + desu/ ‘is N’  /Noun + ja nai desu/ ‘is not N’

/X desu/ means ‘is X’ (Affirmative) and /X ja nai desu/ means ‘is not X’ (Negative). These noun sentences are Non-Past and Formal.

Ame desu yo.  It’s raining.
Kore wa gakkou desu ka.  Is this a school?
Honda-san ja nai desu ka?  Aren’t you Ms. Honda?

A negative question can be also used 1) to show some uncertainty, and 2) to politely correct someone.
1) Ima, na-ji desu ka.  What time is it?
   - Yo-ji ja nai desu ka?  Isn’t it four?
2) San-ji desu yo.  It’s three.
   - Anou, yo-ji ja nai desu ka.  Umm, isn’t it four?

Recall that what is obvious from the context is usually not mentioned in Japanese. In the dialogue above, Ms. Tanaka sees Michael going somewhere, and checks if he is going to work. All she has to say is ‘Is it work (that you are going to)?’

A sentence X wa Y desu is usually translated as ‘X is Y’. However, unlike the English translation, where X equals Y (Y is the identity of X), the interpretation of the Japanese sentence is more open and flexible. Consider the following:

Honda-san wa shigoto desu.

This sentence does not mean ‘Ms. Honda IS work’, but rather for Ms. Honda what is under discussion is the work. So, there are numerous possible interpretations depending on the context. For example, she is at work, her priority is her work, her plan for the weekend is to work, what she likes is her job, to list a few. So, be aware of the context and be imaginative. Now, test your imagination. What can the following possibly mean?

Honda-san wa Panda desu.

2-1-2 Clock Time

Hours are named by attaching –ji to the number. Minutes will be introduced later. You can attach –han to the hour to mean ‘half past the hour’. Note that, unlike English, when asking what time it is, ima ’now’ is commonly used in Japanese, as shown in the dialogue above.

2-1-3 Hesitation Noises: Anou and Etto

Hesitation noises are very common in Japanese conversations. Without them, a conversation may sound too mechanical and abrupt. Japanese conversations tend to favor less direct and less confrontational exchanges. ‘Beating around the bush’ may not be such a bad thing when speaking Japanese. One way to do it is to use hesitation noises. A lot of them!

Anou and etto are two of the most common hesitation noises in Japanese. Anou is the all mighty hesitation noise while etto indicates that you are searching for the right answer. So, when asked what your name is, for example, anou is fine, but not etto. Anou is also used to get attention from a person, but not etto.

Besides the hesitation noises, you also hear Japanese speakers elongating the last vowel of each word, or inserting desu ne between chunks of words to slow down speech.

Imaaa, anooo, Honda-san waaaaa, shigotooo desu.  Honda is at work now.
Drills and Exercises

A. Cue: Ima ku-ji desu ka.
   Response: Iya, juu-ji desu yo.
   Is it nine o’clock?
   No, it’s ten.

   Cue: Ima san-ji desu ka.
   Response: Iya, yo-ji desu yo.
   Is it three o’clock?
   No, it’s four.

B. Cue: Kyou wa baito desu ka.
   Response: Ie, baito ja nai desu.
   Are you working today?
   No, I’m not.

   Cue: Kyou wa ame desu ka.
   Response: Ie, ame ja nai desu.
   Is it raining today?
   No, it isn’t.

C. Say it in Japanese.

   You are heading out in the morning. Mrs. Yamamoto asks you if you are going to work. Reply.

   1. Yes, I’m going to the office (company). Excuse me. What time is it?
   2. No, today is my day off. I’m going shopping.
   3. No, I’m not going to work today. I’m just going out.
   4. Yes, I’m going to work (side job). I’m not returning today. I’ll be back the day after tomorrow. See you later.
   5. No, I’m just taking a little walk. It’s a beautiful day! Won’t you come, too?

   1. Greet a neighbor in the morning. Mention how cold it is. Ask if it’s going to snow tomorrow.
   2. Ms. Honda is heading out. Check if she is going shopping. Warn her that it will rain today.
   3. You’ve been asked if it’s your day off today. Tell Ms. Yamamoto that yes, it is, but you’ll study.
   4. A supervisor is looking for Mr. Yamada. Let her know that he is absent today, but will come tomorrow.
   5. Someone has mistaken you for Mr/s. Smith. Correct him. Use hesitation noises to avoid bluntness.
   6. You’ve been invited to join a neighborhood soccer team. Find out what time practice is scheduled everyday.
   7. You found an error in the schedule. Politely point out that this is not 3:00 and should be 3:30.
Michael meets a business associate and exchanges business cards.

Grammar Notes

2-2-1 Noun no Noun

When one noun describes another in Japanese they are connected together by particle no. /X no Y/ means a kind of Y, which is described by X. Multiple nouns can be connected by particle no, but always the last noun is the main noun. Compare the following:

pasokon no kaisya  a computer company
kaisya no pasokon  a computer in the company

America no pasokon no kaisya  a computer company in the US
America no kaisya no pasokon  a computer (made by) an American company

The relationship between the main noun and other noun(s) varies greatly depending on their meaning. The following are some examples.

Location  Nihon no daigaku  colleges in Japan
Affiliation  J-Netto no Maikeru  Michael from J-Net
Possession  watashi no baggu  my bag
Time  san-ji no baito  work from 3 o’clock
Subgroup  Amerika no Pootorando daigakuin no ichi-nensei  First year graduate student Status  ryuugakusei no Hiru-san  Mr/s. Hill, an exchange student

2-2-2 Loan Words

Japanese has borrowed words and phrases from other languages. The majority of Japanese loanwords these days come from English. When words are borrowed, they go through some changes. First, their pronunciation changes to fit the Japanese sound system. Make sure you learn how your name is pronounced in Japanese. Second, these words usually become nouns, regardless of what they were in their original language. Third, their meaning in Japanese may be different.

As explained in GN1-4-2, by attaching –simasu, many borrowed words that are verbs in the original language can be used as verbs in Japanese (kopii-shimasu ‘copy’). If the original words/phrases are long, they get abbreviated and become very different words from the original (sumaho for smart phone). It’s common to abbreviate two-word phrases by taking the first two syllables from each and combine them to make four syllable words (pasokon for personal computer).

2-2-3 Introductions and Exchange of Business Cards

It’s customary in business situations to exchange business cards when meeting someone for the first time. Keep your cards ready. As you present your card (with both hands, palms up), bow and turn it so that the other person can read it. As you receive the other person’s card, take a moment to read/acknowledge it. You can place their business cards in front of you during the meeting to refer to.

Self-introductions are very common in Japan, during which a person gets up in front of a group and explains who he/she is. These follow a formula, which starts with hajimemashite, followed by your name (even if it has already been mentioned) and other information, and closes with douzo yoroshiku onegai shimasu.
Remember to bow as you introduce yourself, and nod when others bow. It’s better to be safe and bow more often than sorry by bowing too little. When in doubt, bow!

Drills and Exercises

A. Cue: Amerika desu ka. Is it America?
   Response: Hai, Amerika no kaisha desu. Yes, it’s an American company.
   Cue: Furansu desu ka. Is it France?
   Response: Hai, furansu no kaisha desu. Yes, it’s a French company.

B. Cue: Sensei wa Amerikajin desu ka. Is the teacher Japanese?
   Response: Ie, Amerikajin ja nai desu. No, she is not American. She is Japanese.
   Cue: Sensei wa furansujin desu ka. Is the teacher French?
   Response: Ie, furansujin ja nai desu. No, she is not French. She is Japanese.

C. Say it in Japanese.

You are at a reception. You've been asked who that person is.

1. He is Mr. Oda from Google.
2. He is a Vietnamese exchange student. He is a senior.
3. He is a friend from work (company). I’ll introduce you.
4. He is a professor of Economics from an American college.
5. Isn’t he a friend of Ms. Honda’s? I see him a lot.

D. Act in Japanese.

1. You’ve been asked to introduce yourself to everyone in the new office. Perform!
2. Introduce Ms. Young from Bank of Japan to everyone in your office.
3. At a reception, approach a business associate, introduce yourself and exchange business cards.
4. You’ve just met a new exchange student from Taiwan. Ask her what year of school she is in and what she majors in.
5. On a guest list, you see the name of a Mr. Lee. Ask a co-worker a) if he is Mr. Lee from Asia Bank, b) what nationality he has, and c) if he is Korean.

Dialogue 3

Grammar Notes

2-3-1 Echo Questions

As we have seen, it’s common for things that are clear from the context to be left unsaid in Japanese conversation. However, the context may not always be clear to everyone involved. In such cases, people use echo questions (echoing back all or part of what has just been said) for clarification. In the dialogue above, the staff member uses the echo question ‘Do you mean this?’ to check if Michael is referring to the handouts near her.

Michael: Sore, nan desu ka. What is that?
Staff: Kore desu ka. Kyou no sukejuuru desu. This? It’s today’s schedule.

While echo questions are not unique to Japanese, they occur a lot more frequently in Japanese conversations. This is because echo questions are not only used for clarification, but also to slow down the pace of conversation or soften the tone. Recall that hesitation noises are used to take time and avoid direct responses. Echo questions are often used for similar purposes. So, even when there is no need for clarification, Japanese speakers may ask echo questions. In such cases, an answer to the echo question is not necessarily expected.

The most common echo questions are those that repeat the topic nouns, which may have been left unsaid or which are typically marked by the particle wa in the other person’s speech.
Wakarimasu ka? Do [you] understand?
-Watashi desu ka. Iya, amari... Do you mean me? Not really.

Kore wa sumaho desu ka. Is this a smartphone?
-Kore desu ka. Hai. Do you mean this? Yes.

Note here that ‘Sumaho desu ka.’ is impossible as an echo question. Watch out!

*Sumaho desu ka? Hai. Do you mean a smartphone? Yes.

2-3-2  Ano X Ko-so-a-do series #2

In Lesson 1, the first set of ko-so-a-do series (kore, sore, are, dore) was introduced. The second set of the series is kono, sono, ano, and dono. Both sets are based on the same ko-so-a-do distinction (near the speaker, close to the addressee, or away from both).

The difference between the two sets is that the first is a set of nouns and the second is a set of incomplete elements that require a following noun and cannot be used alone. So, while kore is an independent noun meaning ‘this’, kono is linked to a noun, meaning ‘this X’. Note that when translated into English, both kore and kono are translated as ‘this’.

C. Say it in Japanese.

Ms. Honda has asked you what is in the bag.

1. Which bag is it?
2. Do you mean this bag? It’s my smartphone.
3. Do you mean that bag over there? Isn’t it Mr. Oda’s laptop?
4. This is my friend’s umbrella.
5. I don’t know. It’s not my bag.

1. You are at a reception. Approach another guest and ask his name.
2. You caught a sight of Prof. Sato at the reception. Ask a staff member if that woman is in fact Prof. Sato.
3. Ms. Honda is carrying a big bag. Ask what’s in it.
4. You’ve just heard a name of someone. Check if that is a name for a man?
5. Someone has mistaken your bag for hers. Point out her mistake and get your bag back.
6. At the party you’ve been complimented on your Japanese skills. Be humble and respond.

Dialogue 4 ключен

Michael checks the schedule.

Michael: Doyou to nichiyou wa yasumi desu ne. We’re off on Sat. and Sun., right?

Honda: Mochiron desu. Of course.

Michael: Ajia ginkou no apo wa getsuyoubi deshita ne. The appointment with Bank of Asia was on Mon. right?

Honda: E? Kayoubi ja nakatta desu ka. Huh? Wasn’t it on Tues?

Michael: Aa, sou deshita ne! Sumimasen. Oh, that’s right! Sorry.

Grammar Notes

2-4-1  Days of the Week

Youbi indicates days of the week. There are three variations for each day of the week.

getsu, getsu-you, getsu-youbi

The longer, the more formal. Abbreviations like the following are also very common.

Getsu-sui-kin  Mon-Wed-Fri
Kaa-moku  Tue-Thurs.
The question word nan-youbi ‘what day of the week’ cannot be used to ask ‘what day of the month’, which will be introduced later.

2-4-2 Noun to Noun

/X to Y/ means ‘X and Y’. Unlike English ‘and’, which can connect various elements including adjectives, verbs, or sentences, the particle to can only connect nouns or noun phrases.

Nihon to America
Asia Ginkou no Oda-san to J-Netto no Sumisu-san
Mr. Oda from Asia Bank and Mr. Smith from J-Net
Kayoubi to mokuyoubi no jugyou
Kono nihongo no kyoukasho to ano hon
Classes on Tuesday and Thursday
this Japanese textbook and that book

Like other particles, to follows a noun, and when pronouncing, there is no pause between the noun and to (in English, you can pause before ‘and.’) There is no limit to the number of nouns connected, but it’s rare for an adult speaker to list more than three or four.

2-4-3 The Past Form of /X desu/ X deshita, X ja nakatta desu

The forms of /X desu/ including the Non-Past, Past, Affirmative and Negative are shown in the chart below. Make sure you do not use deshita in the Past Negative form.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

<th>Negative</th>

The Past forms are also used to express recollection of information, even when it is information about an event scheduled in the future.

Kaigi wa ashita deshita ne. The meeting was tomorrow, right?
-Iya, asatte ja nakatta desu ka? No, wasn’t it the day after tomorrow?

Drills and Exercises

A. Cue: Kyou wa getsuyoubi desu ne. Today is Monday, right? 🌞
Response: E? Kayoubi ja nai desu ka? What? Isn’t it Tuesday?
