Lesson 3 - Settling Down

Dialogue 1

Michael is checking apartment listings.

Honda: Ii apaato, arimasu ka.
いいアパート、ありますか。
Are there any good apartments?

Michael: Sukunai desu nee.
少ないですねえ。
Very few.

……

Honda: Kono apaato wa dou desu ka?
このアパートはどうですか。
How about this apartment?

Michael: Sou desu nee. Chotto takaku naidesu ka.
そうですねえ。ちょっと高くないですか。
Let’s see. Isn’t it a little expensive?

Grammar Notes

3-1-1 Adjective Sentences

All adjectives in Japanese end in -i (Non Past), -katta (Past), and -ku.

takai expensive
takaku nai
not expensive

To make the Past form, change -i to -katta. For the negative form, change nai to nakatta.

takakatta  was expensive
takaku nakatta  was not expensive

To make a formal style adjective sentence, add desu.

Takai desu. It’s expensive.
Takaku nai desu . It’s not expensive.
Takakatta desu. It was expensive.
Takaku nakatta desu. It was not expensive.

In Lessons 1 and 2 verb sentences and noun sentences were introduced. With the adjective sentences introduced in this lesson you have now seen all three Japanese sentence types. The chart below shows the forms that have been introduced so far.

<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>

<tr>

</tbody>
</table>

The adjective ii has special forms. This is the only exception in the entire class of adjectives.

Ii desu  It’s good
Yoku nai desu  It’s not good
Yokatta desu  It was good.
Yoku nakatta desu.  It wasn’t good.

Yoku is one of the most commonly used adverbs and was already introduced in Lesson 1 as in yoku wakarimasu, yoku tabemasu, etc. Yokatta desu nee is a common response to good news.

3-1-2 Adjective + Noun

In Lesson 2, you saw two ways of extending a noun into a noun phrase. One way is to modify a noun by another, as in the sequence /X no Y/ in the phrase Amerika no kaisha ‘American company.’ Another example is the kono-sono-ano-dono group that precedes a noun, as in ano kaisha ‘that company’. These two ways can be combined as in kono Amerika no kaisha ‘this American company.’

Adjectives can directly modify a noun to make a noun phrase (no need for the particle no).
It’s possible to combine more than one adjective or other modifying elements to extend a noun phrase.

| chiisai takai keitai          | small, expensive cellphone |
| kono Amerika no chiisai takai keitai | this small, expensive American cellphone |

Note that all the modifying elements occur before the main noun, and that the particle no must be attached to a noun modifier wherever it occurs. The order of modifying elements is rather free, unlike in English, where there are certain restrictions.

| chiisai takai kono Amerika no keitai | this small, expensive American cellphone |
| kono watashi no keitai               | this cellphone of mine |
| watashi no kono keitai               | this cellphone of mine |

3-1-3 arimasu ‘there is X’

The verb arimasu means ‘there is’ or ‘I have’. It indicates inanimate existence such as objects, plants, ideas, events, etc. A different verb is used for people and animals and will be introduced later. There are two negative forms for arimasu: arimasen and nai desu. The latter is less formal.

As we have seen so far, nai desu is part of the negative forms for noun and adjective sentences. Arimasen can substitute for nai desu in these forms and sounds a little more elegant.

| Sumaho ja nai desu. | Sumaho ja arimasen. | It’s not a smartphone. |
| Takaku nai desu.    | Takaku arimasen.    | It’s not expensive.    |

Similarly, the Past form arimasen deshita can substitute for nakatta desu.

| Sumaho ja nakatta desu. | Sumaho ja arimasen deshita. | It wasn’t a smartphone. |
| Takaku nakatta desu.    | Takaku arimasen deshita.    | It wasn’t expensive.    |

The chart below shows all the forms including these alternatives.
Note the difference between the following sentences.

Kaisha ja arimasen / Kaisha ja nai desu.  It’s not a company. (Identity)
Kaisha wa arimasen / Kaisha wa nai desu.  There is no company. (Existence)

Drills and Exercises

A. Listen to the audio. Following the first two model exchanges, respond to each cue.

Cue: 高いですか。 Takai desu ka. Is it expensive?
Response: いいえ、安いですよ。 Iie, yasui desu yo. No, it’s cheap, I assure you.
Cue: 義安いですか。 Yasui desu ka. Is it cheap?
Response: いいえ、高いでよ。 Iie, takai desu yo. No, it’s expensive, I assure you.

B. Cue: いいですか。 Ii desu ka. Is it all right?
Response: いいえ、あまりよくないです。 Iie, amari yoku desu. No, it’s not very good.
Cue: 義安いですか。 Yasui desu ka. Is it cheap?
Response: いいえ、あまり安くないです。 Iie, amari yasuku desu. No, it’s not very cheap.

C. Cue: アパートですか。 Apaato desu. Is it an apartment?
Response: いいえ、アパートじゃないです。 Iie, apaato ja arimasen. No, it’s not an apartment.
Cue: 安いですか。 Yasui desu ka. Is it cheap?
Response: いいえ、安くありません。 Iie, yasuku arimasen. No, it’s not cheap.

D. Cue: あれ、高かったですか。 Are, takakatta desu ka. Was that expensive?
Response: いいえ、高くなかったですよ。 Iie, takaku nakatta desu yo. No, it wasn’t.
Cue: あれ、新しかったですか。 Are, atarashikatta desu ka? Was that new?
Response: いいえ、新しくなかったですよ。 Iie, atarashiku nakatta desu yo. No it wasn’t.

E. Say it in Japanese.
You’ve been asked your opinion about an apartment.

1. Let me see...isn’t it big?
2. It’s a little old. Aren’t there any new apartments?
3. It’s not very expensive, but I wonder if it might not be small.
4. I saw it yesterday. It was nice.
5. There are many small apartments, but big ones are scarce, aren't they?
F. Act in Japanese with a partner.

1. Ms. Honda is checking apartment listings. Ask if there is anything good.
2. Ms. Honda has recently moved into a new apartment. Find out how she likes it.
3. At a store, you saw a nice bag, but it’s small. Get the attention of a clerk and ask if there is a big one.
4. A co-worker just broke great news to you. Respond.
5. Ms. Honda went to see an apartment yesterday. Ask her a) how it was, b) if it was good, c) if it wasn’t old.
6. You’ve been asked about your a) apartment, b) school, c) company. Describe.

Dialogue 2

Michael finds an interesting apartment listing.

Michael: Jiu-go-ban wa ikura desu ka.

15番は、いくらですか。

Honda: Rokuman-nanasen-en desu.

六万七千円です。

Warukunai desu yo.

That’s not bad, you know.

Michael: Motto yasui no wa arimasen nee.

もっと安いのはありませんかねえ。

Honda: Chotto muzukashii desu nee.

ちょっとむずかしいですねえ。

Japanese numbers are listed at the end of this lesson. Note that numbers 4, 7 and 9 have alternating forms: yon, yo and shi for 4, nana and shichi for 7 and kyu and ku for 9. The form depends on what classifier is combined with the number (See below for classifiers).

In Japanese, numbers with five or more places are counted in groups of four places (~man, ~oku, ~chou). On the other hand, in English these numbers are counted by groups of threes places (thousands, millions, billions). So, ten thousand in Japanese has a special name man, and succeeding groups of four places have the names ~oku, and ~chou. Traditionally a comma was inserted every four places (10,000 was written 1,0000).

Note that 10, 100 and 1000 do not require ichi, but 10,000 does. In another words, you need to say ichi only for the last place in each four-place group.

So, ¥11111111 is sen hyaku juu ichi man sen hyaku juu ichi en. Also note the following sound changes.

For 100’s (hyaku)  h → b  300 sanbyaku;  ?00 nanbyaku (how many hundreds?)
                  h → pp  600roppyaku;  800 happyaku
For 1000’s (sen)   s → z  3000 sanzen;  ?000 nanzen (how many thousands?)
                  s → ss  8000 hassan

Japanese numbers are usually followed by a classifier, which indicates what is counted or numbered. Use of ‘bare’ numbers is rather limited (counting the number of push-ups, etc.) When counting things in Japanese, numbers are combined with classifiers that are conventionally used for the particular nouns being counted. This is similar to English expressions like “ten sheets of paper” (not ten papers), or “a loaf of bread” (not a bread.)

Recall that the classifier for clock time is –ji, and grade in school is –nensei. We add three more in this lesson: –en for the Japanese currency, –doru for US currency, and –ban for numbers in order (first, second, etc.) Before –ji, 4, 7, and 9 are respectively yo, shichi, and ku. As shown in the chart below, before –en the number 4 is yo, and the numbers 7 and 9 before –en, doru and –ban are nana, and kyuu.
The classifier -ban is also used for ranking (first place, second place, etc.) Ichiban is also used as an adverb to mean ‘most’ or ‘best.’ The pitch accent changes for the adverbial use (Ichiban → iCHIBAN)

The classifier -ban is also used for ranking (first place, second place, etc.) Ichiban is also used as an adverb to mean ‘most’ or ‘best.’ The pitch accent changes for the adverbial use (Ichiban → iCHIBAN)

| Ichiban jouzu | most skillful |
| Ichiban atarashii | newest |
| Ichiban ii daigaku | the best college |

3-2-2 Pronoun No

Recall that we have the following three noun phrase structures.

1. Adjective + Noun       yasui apaato       cheap apartment
2. Kono + Noun           kono apaato       this apartment
3. Noun no Noun          watashi no apaato my apartment

It sounds too wordy and unsophisticated if the same noun is repeated unnecessarily. How can we avoid repeating the main noun in these structures when it is already known from the context?

For Structure 1, replace the noun with the pronoun no. → yasui no inexpensive one
For Structure 2, use kore-sore-are-dore, instead. → kore this
For Structure 3, just drop it. → watashi no mine

The pronoun no can replace the noun directly after an adjective, but is usually not used to refer to people. These rules hold when the three structures are combined.

| kono atarashii apaato this new apartment | kono atarashii no |
| watashi no kono kaban this bag of mine | watashi no kore |
| atarashii Amerika no kaisha new American company | atarashii Amerika no |

3-2-3 ka nee ‘I wonder’
Some sentence particles can occur in combination. One common combination is ka nee ‘I wonder.’ Ka indicates doubt and nee indicates that the speaker assumes the hearer has the same doubt. In the dialogue above, Michael asks if there are cheaper apartments, assuming Ms. Honda understands his situation. Compare the following:

Motto yasui no wa arimasen ka. Aren't there cheaper ones?
Motto yasui no wa arimasen ka nee. I wonder if there are cheaper ones.

While the first asks for an answer, the second does not demand a response because the speaker assumes that the other person shares the same question. The result is softer. Ka nee is also used as a polite response to a question when the speaker does not know the answer.

Drills and Exercises

A. Cue: Go-en desu ka.
   Response: Ie-ie, gojuu-en desu yo.
   Cue: Nihyaku-en desu ka.

   Response: Ichiban ookii no wa, dore desu ka.
   Cue: Minna, furui desu nee.
   Response: Ichiban furui no wa, dore desu ka.

D. Say it in Japanese.
   You’ve been asked the price of something. Reply.

1. ¥ 650
2. ¥ 1010
3. ¥ 14000
4. ¥ 790000
5. ¥ 8800
6. ¥ 3300
7. ¥ 11111

At a meeting, ask what other people think of the following:

8. a newer company
9. the more difficult Chinese textbook
10. the easiest one
11. the cellphone #13
12. Prof. Kimura’s new course on Tue-Thur

D. Act in Japanese with a partner.

1. In a shoe store, you’ve tried on a pair and found them to be too small. Get the attention of a clerk and ask for a little bigger pair.
2. Browsing an online shopping site, Ms. Honda misread the price of an item as 5000 yen. It is actually 50000 yen. Correct her nicely.
3. Find out today’s dollar to yen exchange rate.
4. You are doing a homework assignment. Exclaim that Question #14 is hard. Ask if Ms. Honda gets it.
5. You’ve been asked for your opinion about an apartment. Mention that it is not bad, but you wonder what the rent is.
6. With a partner, ask and answer how much something costs. Exchange opinions about the price.

Dialogue 3

Michael checks the apartment further.

Michael: Sugoku kirei na apaato desu nee.  Its a really beautiful apartment, isn’t it!
Honda: De mo chotto tooku nai desu ka. But isn’t it a little far?
Michael: Sou desu ne. Amari benri ja nai desu nee. You are right. It’s not very convenient, is it.
Honda: Zannen desu nee. Too bad, huh!

Grammar Notes

3-3-1 Na-Nouns

When one noun describes another, there are two possible patterns. You’ve seen one of these already with the particle no: watashi no keitai ‘my cell phone,’ nihongo no sensei ‘the Japanese teacher.’

A smaller set of nouns hooks up to nouns with the particle na: kirei na nihongo ‘beautiful Japanese,’ benri na keitai ‘convenient cell phone.’ These will be called “na nouns.” All na nouns are intangible, but not all intangibles are na nouns. All na nouns will be followed by (na) in the glossary to distinguish them from regular nouns.

Note that the pronoun no can replace the main noun in this combination.

kirei na apaato a clean apartment → kirei na no a clean one amerika no yuumei na kaisha a famous company in America → amerika no yuumei na no a famous one in America

3-3-2 Adjective ~Ku Forms As Adverbs

The –ku form of adjectives are also used as adverbs.

Yoku wakarimasu. I understand it well.
Sugoku kirei desu. It’s really beautiful.
Yasuku kaimashita. I bought it cheaply.
Ookiku kakimasu. I’ll write it big.
Atarashiku tsukurimasu. I’ll remake it.

Drills and Exercises

A. Cue: Kirei desu ka. Is it clean?
Response: Ee, sugoku kirei na apaato desu yo. Yes, it’s a really clean apartment!
Cue: Takai desu ka. Is it expensive?
Response: Ee, sugoku takai apaato desu yo. Yes, it’s a really expensive apartment!

B. Cue: Kirei desu ka. Is it clean?
Response: Iya, kirei ja nai desu yo No, it’s not clean!
Cue: Toodi desu ka. Is it far?
Response: Iya, tooku nai desu yo. No, it’s not far!

C. Say it in Japanese.
You’ve been asked for your opinion about an apartment.

1. Isn’t it a little far?
2. Isn’t it a little inconvenient? Isn’t there anything closer?
3. It’s really beautiful, isn’t it. However, I wonder where it is located.
4. It’s no good. It’s big, but it’s really old. Too bad.
5. It’s that famous apartment, isn’t it. It’s the most expensive one, you know.

D. Act these roles in Japanese with a partner.

1. Your friend got a perfect score on a test. Exclaim your amazement.
2. A co-worker mentions that she will not make it to the company event. Express your disappointment.
3. You’ve been asked to give a speech in Japanese. Humbly turn down the opportunity and ask if there isn’t anyone better.
4. A co-worker has shown you a picture of his mother. Comment how beautiful she is.
5. Compare products in the market by manufacturer, price, size, usefulness, etc.

Dialogue 4 ☺

Michael has settled into his new apartment. Ms. Honda is checking if he needs anything.

Honda: Isu toka tsukue, arimasu ka. いすとか つくえ、ありますか。

Michael: Hai, isu mo tsukue mo arimasu. はい、いすも つくえも あります。Daijoubu desu. 大丈夫です。

Honda: Hontou desu ka. Terebi wa? 本当ですか。テレビは？

Michael: Aa, terebi wa irimasen. ああ、テレビはいりません。

Vocabulary ☺

isu いす  chair
toka とか  such (things) as tsukue つくえ  desk
isu toka tsukue いすとかつくえ  things like chairs and a desk ~mo ~mo 〜も〜も  both ~ and ~ isu mo tsukue mo いすもつくえも  both chairs and desks daijoubu だいじょうぶ（な）大丈夫  fine, safe, okay
Grammar Notes

3-4-1 X toka Y, X ya Y

/Noun to ka Noun/ means that the referenced nouns are examples of the category under discussion. /Noun ya Noun/ is its more formal version. More than two examples can be listed, but it’s unusual to have more than three or four.

_Isu toka tsukue, arimasu ka._ Do you have things like chairs and desks?
_Isu ya tsukue arimasu ka._ Do you have things like chairs and desks?

_Isu toka tsukue toka terebi, arimasu ka._ Do you have things like a chair, desk, and TV?

_Toka_ does not require another noun to follow it while _ya_ does. Therefore, the following are possible.

_Keitai toka tsukaimasu ka._ Do you use things like smartphone?
_Keitai toka sumaho toka tsukaimaus ka._ Do you use things like cellphones and smartphones?

3-4-2 X mo Y mo  ‘both X and Y’ ‘neither X nor Y’

_X mo Y mo_ means ‘both X and Y’ in an affirmative sentence and ‘neither X nor Y’ in a negative sentence. Compare the three responses below.

_Kore to are, irimasu ka._ Do you need this and that?
_Hai, kore mo are mo irimasu._ Yes, I need them both.
_Iie, kore mo are mo irimasen._ No, I don’t need either this or that.
_Iie, kore wa irimasu kedo, are wa irimasen._ No, I need this, but I don’t need that.

In the first two responses, both items share a similarity, i.e., you need both or you don’t need either, but in the third sentence the two items are being contrasted, i.e. you need one but not the other, thus the particle _wa_ is used.
Drills and Exercises

A. Listen to the audio. Following the first two model exchanges, respond to each cue. 🎧

Cue: Isu to ka tsukue, arimasu ka. Do they have things like chairs and desks?
Response: Hai, isu mo tsukue mo arimasu. Yes, they have both chairs and desks.

Cue: Keetai to ka sumaho, arimasu ka. Do they have things like mobile phones and smart phones?
Response: Hai, keetai mo sumaho mo arimasu. Yes, they have both mobile phones and smart phones.

B. Cue: Isu ya tsukue, arimasu ka. Do they have things like chairs and desks? 🎧
Response: Ie, isu mo tsukue mo arimasen. No, they have neither chairs nor desks.
Cue: Eigo ya Supeingo, wakarimasu ka. Do they understand things like English and Spanish?
Response: Ie, eigo mo supeingo mo wakarimasen. No, they understand neither English nor Spanish.

C. Say it in Japanese.

You’ve been asked what you need for your new apartment.

1. I have everything. I’m fine.
2. I have a chair, but I have neither a desk nor a table.
3. I have a refrigerator, but I do not have a washer. I wonder if there is a cheap washer.
4. I have a bed and chair, but I do not have a TV. I do not have a vacuum cleaner, either.
5. I have things like a table and chair, but I do not have a refrigerator, a washer, etc.

You’ve been asked about this weekend’s weather.

6. It will be nice on both Sat. and Sun.
7. It will be nice on Sat., but it will rain on Sun.
8. It will be nice on Sat. and Sun., but it will rain on Monday.
9. It rained yesterday AND today, right? I wonder if it will rain again tomorrow.
10. It was cold yesterday. But it will be beautiful on Sunday.

D. Act in Japanese with a partner.
1. A stranger just slipped and fell in front of you. React!
2. You’ve just heard something incredible. Express your surprise/disbelief.
3. Find out if your classmates do Facebook, Twitter, etc.
4. Ask a co-worker if he cleans, does laundry, etc. often.
5. With a partner, discuss what furniture/appliances you have in your apartments, how they are, and what you need. Make sure you are a good listener. Use hesitation noise, and echo questions where appropriate.
Grammar Review

1. Japanese has three types of sentences: verb sentence, noun sentence and adjective sentence. Give example of each in the Non-past and Past affirmative forms and their negative forms. (3-1-1)

2. We have seen various examples of the following ways to expand a noun into a noun phrase. (3-1-2, 3-2-2, 3-3-1)
   - Noun no Noun
   - Adjective + Noun
   - Kono + Noun
   - Noun na Noun

   a. Give an example of each.
   b. Give an example of a noun phrase with all the modifiers above combined.
   c. What happens in each case when the main noun is already understood?

3. Compare the difference in meaning among the following: (3-4-1, 3-4-2)
   a. Kami to enpitsu, irimasu ka.
   b. Kami to enpitsu mo irimasu ka.
