The Nonprofit Nerd (January 2019)

The Nonprofit Institute at Portland State University

Let us know how access to this document benefits you.

Follow this and additional works at: https://pdxscholar.library.pdx.edu/npi_newsletter

Part of the Nonprofit Administration and Management Commons

Citation Details 12.
https://pdxscholar.library.pdx.edu/npi_newsletter/12

This Newsletter is brought to you for free and open access. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Nonprofit Institute Newsletter by an authorized administrator of PDXScholar. For more information, please contact pdxscholar@pdx.edu.
If you're interested in learning more about culturally-responsive program evaluation and topics in Native and enrollment in Fall 2019.

If this is your first foray into culturally-responsive evaluation, you may benefit from conference on educational evaluation undergraduates and includes an example logic model. Also, this France's work "Association (AEA) topical interest groups (TIGs). The evaluation, we recommend this presentation from Terry Cross on culturally-responsive interventions to particular populations. For an example of a local culturally-specific service Culturally-specific services contribute to a community's The best place to begin is to learn from culturally-specific services. Culturally-specific services are an antidote to bringing those four quadrants into alignment, into balance, [and] hopefully it's a harmony.

community so that they'll know what they have to draw on. The asset mapping helps the community have the a community will ask us to come in and think about dealing with an issue of abuse or neglect, or the influence of challenges. You don't have to solve every problem, or you don't have to find the huge issue… to change about one thing at all. It's about the balance of many things.

community? what's important to their community. strong buy-in. I really encourage others to use a community-based model and really work with the people about what outcomes to measure. So, as a community they'd ask "how's our research coming along?" You know you have a function. In many cases we found that as we took public policy issues to leaders they would say to us "where is doing that work of advocacy, we realized that if we were going to be successful we had to have a research have the resources and their rights have to be protected.

One of the reasons that I've described the four areas that NICWA works in is that they're all tied together. At our research or program evaluation is the misuse of research historically and research that is done from an outside research efforts?

constraints affect services. We assess whether leadership is a support or challenge. We're looking at all those four or not they are facing a crisis in their community with opiate addiction and if the program is responsive to that. We're also looking at what's the scope of the program and what are the issues that they are responding to, so we are going to be used. I'll give you an example: we never publish anything without the permission of the community research projects because people have a lot of ownership of measuring the outcomes. And when you use a gathering and program evaluation with the possibility of so many different ways of knowing?

NICWA works with a variety of Native/Indigenous cultures. How do you make decisions on data NICWA's basis of our work, we refer to as the relational worldview model. We make sure that we are testing all of How does NICWA conceptualize knowledge and ways of knowing? Is this understanding unique to...