City Club of Portland Bulletin vol. 01, no. 17 (1921-1-14)

City Club of Portland (Portland, Or.)
CITY PLANNING

BUREAU REPORTS

There will be found elsewhere in this issue of the Bulletin two tables of more than ordinary interest, dealing with the various projects commanding public attention and coming within the range of this Bureau's activities, along with notations of cost, present status, body of control and other details. The information given therein is as complete as it can be made at this time, but as the various plans therein outlined mature, additional reports will be submitted to the Club.

With a personnel of approximately eighty, it is deemed that future progress is not to be sought by enlargement of the bodies handling these several projects but rather by judicious direction of or among those existing and especially by some reorganization or allotment that will secure a proper coordination of effort on the one hand, amounting to consolidation or some sort of fusion, and, especially by a system of procedure that insures direction, control and review of each project in relation to others and the whole. Thereupon final recommendation will carry sufficient weight to warrant public acceptance of the separate proposals. It is a weakness of direction when a publicly recommended project must be returned for revised study.

Some of the larger projects are really parts of a single problem and should be developed, reviewed, approved and recommended by a single body and all of them should pass through a single and final reviewing, analyzing and recommending body. Accordingly we repeat a former recommendation as being the essence of our combined labors during the term of our office, namely that the prominent need is one of integration of all City Planning studies, regardless of how many separate bodies or the number of subdivisions of schemes being developed at any particular time. If legislation and machinery are to do City Planning, we seem to have ample quantity of both to secure results of a most gratifying sort.

The special requirements now are a general directing program that will select those subjects of importance in relation to needs, sequence of development, community capacity of defraying costs and those that offer the greatest return on the investments necessary. Having selected them, it will be an essential part of promoting to a successful conclusion to direct the order, scope and method of research required and to pass judgment upon the findings submitted and the conclusions reached. We should have no projects submitted if they are beyond the capacity of the community to utilize in a practical way. Likewise, the importance and cost of each is a matter to be thoroughly investigated and individually and collectively reviewed previous to its public promulgation. Each development initiated and undertaken should be technically sound and merit the approval of business judgment as a good investment and at the same time be a reflection of the community aims.

With sufficient agencies delegated to do the work, the results now depend upon the thoroughness and wisdom displayed in their several and completed labors.

To date we have had three different sets of plans proposed for different parts of the city planning required. We have had some excellent work done in this field, especially by the Committee of Fifteen. Also the City Engineer has done well in a preliminary start of river front improvement. On the other hand we find large expenditures are being made in road work without the accompanying evidence that it is being conducted with the comprehensive general direction desirable to insure its harmonizing, in the best way, with further developments destined to take place in the future. Bridge matters and park affairs are notable examples yet in both cases apparently special endeavor has been made to secure the very assistance mentioned. Failure to receive it would indicate that some investigation of where the trouble arises would seem to be in order.

One of the large and important tasks now before the community is river improvement, an undertaking that embraces harbor and terminal development, river front and traffic-way arrangements and a series of secondary works such as bridges and park schemes.

Another is the evolving of a proper means of establishing a subdivision of the hills on the west side. The abnormal pressure they exert on transportation and the attendant losses, wastes and forced expenditures sustained, due to precipitating investment outlays in bridges, lengthening and multiplying of streets, sewers and water pipes, also, the extravagance of time consumed in consequence of the diffused land occupation and lack of compact centralization reflects itself in use, administration and costs. At present the hills exert an influence similar to what would exist were they a insurmountable wall. They are large factors in causing property to be held as undeveloped acreage within a mile of the Court House while yet in other directions city improvements have extended six, eight and ten miles. It is worthy of reflecting what the effect of this situation is on cost of operation, loss of taxable revenue and the effect it has on the business district of the community.
